INQUIRY BEGUN WHEN BULLET KILLS HUSBAND

Police Believe Salesman Suicide as His Wife Tells Story.

SAW HIM SLAY SELF, SHE AND FRIEND SAY

Rode to Apartment After Dance to Get Gun, They Declare.

INQUEST TO BE HELD TOMORROW MORNING

Milkman Describes Scuffle He Saw Near Auto to Authorities.

An inquest was ordered by Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt to clear up various elements in the fatal shooting early yesterday of Irvin W. Zepp, 25-year-old salesman, outside the Connesticut Apartments, managed by his father, T. Raymond Zepp.

Authorities, after questioning Mrs. Mattie Lou Zepp, wife of the salesman, and Cyril B. Smith, radio dealer, of 2710 Ontario road, who witnessed the tragedy, were of the opinion that Zepp died of a self-inflicted wound. The inquest will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Police learned that Mr. and Mrs. Zepp and Smith attended a dance sponsored by Beta Chapter of the Lambda Phi Sorority Saturday night at Argyle Country Club, Md. They drove to the dance in Smith's car, leaving their own machine in front of their residence at 1803 Biltmore street northwest.

Drinking at Dance, Is Claim.

Mrs. Zepp told police that at the dance her husband began drinking and became very moody. After the dance was over, Mrs. Zepp said, she and her husband got in Smith's car and her husband requested him to drive to their residence, where she and her husband then got in their machine.

They drove away, intending, she said, to go to a downtown restaurant to eat. Smith, knowing of their plans, she said, followed them in his machine.

En route to the restaurant, Mrs. Zepp said, her husband continued in his strange mood, driving recklessly. She recalled that he remarked, "I'll show you something you're never seen before," and from his demeanor she said she feared he meant to end his life.

Smith Follows Zepp.

As they approached the Connecticut Apartments, at 1150 Connecticut avenue, Mrs. Zepp said her husband drove into the Eighteenth street driveway and Smith followed through the other entrance.

Mrs. Zepp, police say, said that she feared that her husband might be going for a revolver in her room in the apartment house, where she is employed as a telephone operator by her father-in-law. She said she beckoned to Smith to follow her husband. Mrs. Zepp also asserted that her husband had placed the revolver in her room several weeks ago after returning from a business trip.

Authorities learned from Graham Brown, colored, bellboy, that Zepp called and asked for the key to his wife's room, which is on the first floor. Smith, according to the bellboy, remained in the hallway while Zepp went into the room.

Trigger Pulled Twice, Claim.

When her husband reappeared, according to Mrs. Zepp, he walked to the automobile where she was seated and pulled the trigger of the revolver. She said she heard the click as the gun failed to go off. Again, she said, her husband pulled the trigger, this time successfully, as Smith attempted to wrest the revolver from his hand. Her husband collapsed as the bullet entered his body.

Smith's story, according to police, differs slightly from Mrs. Zepp's version of the tragedy. He said that when Zepp drew up to the apartment the latter informed him that he was going to the lavatory. He said that he waited in the hallway for Zepp and that when he reappeared he walked to the driveway.

Zepp, Smith said, walked toward his car and he went toward his own machine some distance away. As he walked, Smith turned around and saw a pistol in Zepp's hand, he said. As he raced toward Zepp, he went on, the latter fired a shot and collapsed.

Taken Into Doctor's Office.

Smith carried Zepp into the office of Dr. Sterling Ruffin, specialist, who lives in the apartment. Dr. Ruffin pronounced him dead. The bullet had entered Zepp's chest on the right side, piercing his lungs and lodging under his left arm.

Albert E. Swayer, milkman, of 1421 Thirty-fifth street, another eyewitness of the tragedy, was questioned by Lieut. Edward Kelly, chief of the homicide squad, who conducted the investigation of the case. Swayer said that he was standing across the street and saw a commotion about the car and then heard a revolver shot.

The Zepps had been married about four years. Zepp was a traveling salesman for a Philadelphia tapestry and fabric firm.

Delay on Large Navy Demands Held Likely

Senate Leaders Confident of Pact Ratification at This Session, but Construction Foes May Hold Up Proposed Building Legislation.

(Associated Press.)

Ratification of the London naval limitations treaty at this session appeared certain last night, but Senate leaders believed the demands of the big Navy group for immediate legislation authorizing a building up of the Navy to the strength allowed by the pact would go over.

Very carefully, foes of the billion-dollar construction program required under the treaty have laid the groundwork for opposition to it. In the hearings before the Senate foreign relations committee on the treaty, Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, has received testimony from admiral after admiral opposing construction of all the 6-inch cruisers allowed under the pact.

It is the contention of the Navy command that America does not need the 6-inch gun cruisers favored by Great Britain, and Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, retired, has asserted that if America builds up to her full strength under the treaty she will have a "frozen" tonnage in a class of ships she does not require when the treaty expires in 1937.

A conference of Senate Republicans will decide today just when it will take up the treaty, whether in the regular or in the special session which President Hoover has given notice he will call if necessary.

Proponents of thte pact continued confident yesterday that the votes were overwhelmingly for the treaty in the Senate and it was believed that little time would be required in debate, once under way.

However, hearings will be resumed today by both the foreign relations and the naval committees with the opposition anxious to examine others in the Navy who have expressed outspoken condemnation of the pact.

Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, is confident the hearings can be concluded by midweek and a report submitted to the Senate on the treaty before the end of the week, thus leaving it in a position to be taken up as soon as the tariff is out of the way.

Big Navy supporters of the treaty have demanded some promise that a construction program will be put under way to build the American fleet up to full strength allowed by the pact. Chairman Britten, of the House naval affairs committee, already has introduced legislation to start this construction program. It calls for a billion-dollar expenditure over a ten-year period.

However, the opposition to such a program is ready to speak up, and with the evidence it has enrolled from the Navy general board itself before foreign relations committee, it seems unlikely that the issue will be thrashed out at this session.

While the Navy leaders have opposed building the additional light cruisers allowed by the treaty, they have all advocated that the other new ships within the scope of the pact be built.

GRAF ZEPPELIN, RIO VISIT OVER, FLIES TO NORTH

Craft Quits Pernambuco Tuesday for Flight to United States.

BOW TO BRAZILIAN CAPITAL VERY BRIEF

Dawn Silvers Huge Ship as She Sails Above Waiting City.

WILL VISIT HAVANA ON LAKEHURST TRIP

Rio de Janeiro, May 25 (A. P.).—With a mere flip of her big silver bag, the Graf Zeppelin this morning ducked in and out of Rio de Janeiro, to pay her long-heralded courtesy visit to the Brazilian capital, in less than two hours and a quarter.

Appearing over the harbor at dawn, the Graf sailed out again before 9 a. m. (7 a. m., Eastern standard time) and at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon (1:15 p. m. Eastern standard time) her passage over Victoria, 300 miles away, was signaled on the return voyage to Pernambuco.

A radio dispatch tonight said the Zeppelin passed over the steamship Almirante Jaceguay and the Brazilian cruisers Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul at 7:10 p. m. (5:10 p. m. Eastern standard time) about 331 miles north of Victoria.

President-elect Julio Prestes of Brazil was aboard the steamship bound for the United States, where he will return at Washington the preinaugural visit to Brazil of President Hoover. The cruisers are his escort.

Due at Pernambuco This Morning.

She is due at Pernambuco early this morning and probably will start north for Havana and Lakehurst Tuesday, crossing the Equator again and quitting the Southern Cross and the Southern Hemisphere for the pole star and the northern half of the world.

The Zeppelin's visit at Campo Dos Affonsos, Brazilian army landing field, was about the shortest she has ever made anywhere. Dr. Hugo Eckener did not even get out of the gondola, receiving Brazilian government officials and members of the German colony aboard his ship.

From the time the first landing rope was thrown overboard till the last had been drawn up, exactly 1 hour and 32 minutes elapsed. The Zeppelin was stationary over the field, held by Brazilian soldiers acting as ground crew, for just an hour and twelve minutes. Owing to the early hour and to the uncertainty last night about the exact time of her arrival, only a few thousand spectators were present.

Abandons Cruise to Colonies.

Abandoning his reported project of a cruise to the German colonies in southern Brazil, Dr. Eckener had brought the Zeppelin to a halt outside the headlands of Rio de Janeiro Harbor about midnight last night.

As the first rays of the sun touched the famous Pao d'Assucar, or "Sugar Loaf," Mountain, dominating the city, the Graf's commander steered her into Guanabara Bay, her appearance was greeted by blasts of whistles and sirens from tugs and ferryboats.

All Rio jumped out of bed for a look at the world-traveled airship. In between the bluff headlands, the long silver bag nosed its way, its

QUARTET SLAIN AS GUNS BLAZE IN LIQUOR FEUD

BYSTANDER KILLED. EIGHT ARE WOUNDED

MURDER WARRANTS CITE ARRESTED PAIR

Fatal Melee Climaxes Long-Standing Enmity Between Lawless Factions.

Lepanto, Ark., May 25 (A.P.)—Four men, who, officers said, were known to them as leaders of two bitterly hostile liquor-running factions, met at an outdoor carnival here early today and used pistols to settle their feud. Before Police Chief W. R. Adam brought his own gun into play to end the battle, two of them and a third man were killed, another of the quartet died of his wounds tonight and eight bystanders were shot.

All of the eight wounded bystanders are expected to recover.

The dead were Ira "Blackie" Williams, 21; Walter Mobs, 38; Clyde Keller, 33, and George Laudermilk, 35, who was in the line of fire.

Keller died in a Jonesboro, Ark., hospital tonight. He was shot by the police chief.

Murder Warrants Issued.

Hugh Luttrell about 40, was arrested at his home near Marked Tree, Ark., today by Sheriff Landers, of Harrisburg, as one of the participants.

Warrants charging murder were sworn out late today against Keller and Luttrell. Sheriff Landers said at Harrisburg that Luttrell would be held there and the warrants against Keller would be served if the wounds did not prove fatal.

The sheriff said Keller was shot nine times. He had not been able to determine just who was responsible for the shots which killed the three victims.

The story told today by City Attorney John Mosby, of Lepanto, and E. L. Shinaberry, town marshal at Marked Tree, home of all the dead, was an account of a feud spotted with fist fights and court appearances during the last year.

Fires to Save Crowd.

The authorities said that about a year and a half ago Keller and Luttrell fought each other. Eleven days ago, Shinaberry said, Williams and Luttrell, who the marshal said, led a faction opposing Keller and mobs, attacked Keller and beat him badly. Shinaberry said each of the trio was fined $50.

Last night, both Mosby and Shinaberry agreed, the quartet met suddenly and the shooting resulted Mosby said Chief Adams shot Keller as the only means of ending the row and saving a crowd standing about the tent shows.

Laudermilk, it was said, was not involved in the feud. He had been hired to transport the carnival from Lepanto to Luxora, after it ended its engagement here last night.

Two Women Wounded.

Of the bystanders wounded, Jess Wright, farmer, about 40, suffered most seriously. A Negro, Curly Bradenton, Lepanto, was shot several times, but was expected to live. Two women, Mrs. Nathan Curtis and Mrs.

PRESIDENT AND PARTY TARIFF CHIEFS AGREE ON FLEXIBLE CLAUSE

MEASURE PREPARED FOR SENATE TODAY

MISUNDERSTANDINGS ARE CLEARED AWAY

Hoover Willing to Forego Some of Power Given to Change Duties.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover and Republican tariff leaders in Congress reached an accord late yesterday on the new flexible tariff provision of the Hawley-Smoot measure and it will be submitted to the Senate today without change.

The President had found certain sections of the new flexible provisions unsatisfactory, after being informed of their contents Saturday by telephone at his Rapidan River fishing camp in Virginia, and dispatched four senatorial guests back to Washington late Saturday night with a suggested modification.

The conferences continued late yesterday after Mr. Hoover returned unusualy early from his week-end retreat and it was apparent that he had not been given all the details of the clause.

Confer by Telephone.

After conferring with Attorney General Mitchell and Solicitor General Thatcher at the White House and with Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, by telephone, the President was represented as favoring the compromise flexible amendment.

Senator Smoot, who is chairman of the Senate conferees on the bill, was prepared to call the conferees together today to consider the changes suggested by the President, but after talking with Mr. Hoover, said he would submit the conference report with the new flexible provision to the Senate today without change. Debate on the report will begin tomorrow.

Mr. Hoover was represented as being particularly pleased with the provision delegating to the tariff commission power to consider invoice values and "other relevant factors that constitute an advantage or disadvantage in competition," as well as costs of production of foreign and domestic articles, in determining changes in statutory rates. He believes this will permit a speeding up of the commission's work.

Willing to Forego Power.

It was reiterated by those close to the Chief Executive that he was willing to forego some of the power now given the President to change duties, and the Government's leading law officers were said to have held the new flexible provision in its entirety as unassailable from a legal standpoint.

However, Senate Democratic leaders contended the provision was unconstitutional and served notice they would attack it on this ground when debate opens on the conference report tomorrow.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the Republican independents, who with the Democrats, wrote the provision in the bill returning to Congress the flexible rate-changing power, also said he would oppose the new clause. He said it was a "monstrosity."

Robinson Attacks Clause.

In a statement issued through his party's national commitee, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said the new flexible provision "constitutes a delegation of legislative authority which renders the same invalid."

Republican leaders in Congress were in a high state of confusion when

Data on Dawn of Man Sought in Gobi Desert

Roy Chapman Andrews Seeks Ancestors of "Peking Woman."

Peiping, China, May 25 (A.P.).—Roy Chapman Andrews, celebrated American explorer and zoologist, specializing on the study of primitive man in Asia, announced today that he would start tomorrow on his latest expedition into Mongolia in search of the birthplace of man.

The expedition will leave here for Kalgan, on the Great Wall of China, about 100 miles northwest of Peiping, at noon. Five months will be spent in the field, and the explorers of the American Museum of Natural History plan to cover an area of between 3,000 and 4,000 square miles in the Gobi Desert where few white men have ever been before.

The expedition, after leaving Kalgan, will travel northwest through desert country by automobile for about 400 miles. Then it will work eastward to a district that has never been mapped, but lies about half way from Kalgan to the Russian frontier and to the east of the Kalkan-Urga road and telegraph line.

Trace of the ancestors of the million-year-old "Peking woman" will be

PEDESTRIAN KILLED WHEN STRUCK DOWN

WOMAN BADLY INJURED

Automobile crashes in Washington and its environs over the week-end took a toll of one life and sent to hospitals more than a half-dozen others, one with injuries which may prove fatal.

Death claimed Francis William Thompson, 56 years old, of Ballston, Va., a few minutes after he was struck by an automobile on the Wilson boulevard at Woodstock avenue in Clarendon, Va., early yesterday morning when he suddenly walked upon the thoroughfare from a clump of bushes while walking home from Washington.

He was hit by a machine driven by Albert Hillery, of Clarendon, a dairyman, while en route to work in this city. Hillery immediately halted Boyd F. Rohrback, of 943 Massachusetts avenue northwest, passing in a automobile, and the pair took Thompson to Georgetown Hospital, where the man was pronounced dead upon arrival. He had received a fracture of the skull among other hurts.

A. D Langley, Clarendon constable, was notified of the man's death and held Hillery in the Arlington County Jail until William C. Gloth, Commonwealth attorney, and Sheriff Howard B. Fields had made an investigation. After they had declared that the dairyman was blameless, he was released.

Thompson, who was a bricklayer, employed in construction work at the Library of Congress, leaves a widow and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Cameron, of Ballston. No funeral arrangements had been made last night.

Mrs. Caroline Zoller, 83 years old, of 2810 Thirtieth street southeast, is believed dying at Casualty Hospital as the result of a collision between automobiles near Clinton, Md., yes-

1930 CONSTRUCTION SET AT $452,910,000

ROAD-BUILDING LEADING

(Associated Press.)

The valuation of new contracts let for public works and utilities construction in the United States during the first four months of the present year as $452,910,000 was announced yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Lamont.

He said that the total was 30 per cent in excess of similar contracts let during the same period last year. The record was declared to be "a significant and highly gratifying advance, indicating fefetcive cooperation of all concerned" in President Hoover's effort to stimulate general business.

The largest single item in the department's compilation was furnished by the road building program, the total expenditure on which for the first four months was indicated at $196,678,000 against $142,000,000 during the same period last year.

In the endeavor to indicate what that sum means in terms of employment, the statement said during recent years, the number of men employed in the country on road construction during the first quarter has averaged 200,000, which number has customarily increased to 400,000 during the second quarter. The 1930 contract totals are taken to mean that these totals of employment will be sharply increased.

In other types of construction form road work, the greatest gain has been made this year in contract totals for lighting and park development, which are placed at 96 per cent more than last year. On water supply systems, the 1930 expenditure is running 66 per cent above last year; on bridges, 42 per cent, and on railroad construction 16 per cent. Contracts awarded for hospitals and institutions this year are 121 per cent in excess of last

20,000 SEE SERVICES HONORING WAR DEAD

75 GROUPS PARTICIPATE

Hundreds of American flags and the standards of 75 patriotic organizations were carried in colorful procession before a congregation of upward of 20,000 persons assembled in the open air amphitheater of Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon at the third annual massing of the colors service, sponsored by the Military Order of the World War.

The procession first appeared on the massive Pilgrim Steps below the south transept of the Washington Cathedral, within whose confines rests the late Woodrow Wilson, dominant figure of the World War, and Admiral George Dewey, outstanding hero of the Spanish American conflict. As it marched down to the Pilgrims' road below, the glorious coloring of the standards making a striking contrast to the stone steps, it was an epitome of America's valor and her heroic dead. Flags of veteran organizations, overseas groups, patriotic societies and the impressive unit of the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts mingled in picturesque tribute to the sons and daughters of America who, since the founding of the Republic, had given their lives that their Nation might live.

To the music of "Onward Christian Soldiers," played by the United States Marine Band, the procession came down the center aisle of the amphitheater and massed its colors before a huge rustic golden cross against the base of which was placed flaming Flanders poppies.

After the procession of patriotic organizations and their banners came a cathedral crucifix bearing high the Sinai Cross, followed by the white and purple garbed choristers of the cathedral and several hundred boy choristers of Washington Episcopal

MANY HURT IN INDIA SALT-RAID CLASHES

35 Injured in Riot at Wadala and 115 Are Arrested by Police.

DISTURBANCE IN BOMBAY

Bombay, India, May 2 (A.P.).—Riotous attacks in the Indian civil disobedience campaign broke out here and at the Wadala salt deposits today, and the police clashed several times with Nationalist volunteers.

Thirty-five persons, including a policeman, were hurt in an attempt by Mahatma Gandhi's followers to raid the Wadala salt pans. A dozen were seriously injured.

Police broke up the raiding parties, but small groups of volunteers succeeded in reaching the pans and carrying off salt. One hundred and fifteen arrests were made.

In Bombay, a riotous crowd shouted revolutionary cries outside a courthouse where seven members of the National Congress were going on trial after having been arrested a fortnight ago at Kohat.

The police charged with their lathis and several Indians were hurt. Thirty-five were arrested.

The riot at Wadala was precipitated by a party of 100 volunteers who crept up close to the depot early in the morning. The police were waiting for them, however, and fought them back with their staves.

Adopting guerrilla tactics, the raiders rushed past the police and obtained a considerable quantity of salt, but in the end the police routed them. Those arrested included M. Bhumgara, leader of the raiders.

Bhumgara, a noted cyclist, was accompanied by a number of Parsis, members of the Zoroastrian religion. As he was dragged away by the police, he exhorted the Zoroastrians to plunge headlong into the civil disobedience movement.

At Untadi Camp, the police arrested Ambalal Patel, who had taken charge of the volunteers near Dharasana.

The authorities issued orders prohibiting for two months any asssem-

Flint, Mich., May 25 (A.P.).—Grant J. Brown, former president of the Union Industrial Bank of Flint, was acquitted today by a jury in circuit court of charges of embezzling which resulted from a $3,592,000 shortage discovered last fall.

Brown was succeeded as president of the bank by Charles S. Mott, vice president of General Motors Corporation, formerly chairman of the board of directors of the bank, who turned over millions of dollars of his personal fortune to cover the shortage after it was discovered.

The jury of nine men and three women deliberated 43 hours.

Business in Washington

By E. C. OWEN,
President Hotel Association of Washington.

I can not possibly see why any one in a legitimate or substantial business should be alarmed over the present or future trend of general business conditions. I have talked to many people coming and going from the different sections of the country and have yet to find one who will not acknowledge that the present conditions as a whole are far better than any one would have predicted for this period ten years ago.

There is no doubt in my mind that certain readjustments are gradually taking place and will continue until a normal base is reached. You will remember that there is always a slow-down when the tariff is being revised. When this is settled, the business people will know where they stand, and then business will assume greater strides than ever before.

There is not a better sign of prosperity than to see people traveling, and this they are doing more than ever before. Each year seems to exceed in numbers over the previous year, and, as long as this continues, there can be no doubt about our present prosperity, as the traveling public is giving and seeking information from every source, which is of great benefit to each and every one from a social and business standpoint.

Judge, Missing Nine Days, Discovered Dead in Quarry

Body Badly Crushed by 175-Foot Fall Into Pit and Posses Had Passed It, Hidden by Trees, Many Times During Search.

Oakland, Calif., May 25 (A.P.).—The crushed body of Superior Judge Edward W. Engs was found today in a stone quarry at Clifton street near Broadway, Oakland, within a few blocks of his home. The jurist, who had been missing since a week ago Friday, had fallen 175 feet from the crest of the quarry which adjoins a cemetery.

The quarry, owned by the Oakland Paving Co., had been searched for days by police and possemen accompanied by dogs. That the body of Judge Engs, who disappeared after a nervous breakdown occasioned by the strain of a court trial, was not found earlier, was explained by the fact he fell by a clump of willow trees, the foliage of the trees almost exactly matched the judge's gray-green clothing.

The body was found shortly after 1 a. m. by Paul Bonham and Jack Mayer, workmen who had spent days within a few feet of the willows dragging the lake in the bottom of the quarry.

Coroner Grant D. Miller and Dr. N. N. Ashley, county autopsy surgeon, examined the body. They reported that while the immediate cause of death was an internal hemorrhage of the lungs, Judge Engs' body was literally crushed. Both arms and legs were broken, the right thigh was fractured, the chest was crushed and all the ribs on the right side had punctured vital organs.

No evidence of foul play was discovered. Examination of a ledge at informed the President wanted a modification of the flexible provision agreed to in conference Saturday. They could not understand it, as Walter H. Newton, secretary to Mr. Hoover, had conferred at length with Senator Smoot and Representative Hawley (Republican), Oregon, chairman of the House conferees, before the conferees finally approved the new plan.

However, after yesterday's conferences they were considerably calmed and it was evident that the President had been given some erroneous interpretations of the text in Saturday's telephone conversation with his Virginia camp.

Returns Senatorial Envoys.

First, the President dispatched his four senatorial guests—Senators Allen, of Kansas; Hatfield, of West Virginia; Walcott, of Connecticut, and Goldsborough, of Maryland—back to Washington Saturday night. They immediately went into conference with Senator Smoot, Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Thatcher.

Returning yesterday from his retreat, the President called in Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Thatcher for a personal interview. It was after this conference that it was learned the President had approved of the new flexible plan and that it would be submitted to the Stenate without modification.

The compromise clause sharply curtails existing presidential authority in that it would require the Executive to approve or disapprove a Tariff Commission recommendation within 60 days after a commission finding is submitted to him. At present the President may ignore a commission report as long as he pleases and let it die by inaction.

On the other hand, the Tariff Commission is given added authority under the new plan. Where differences in costs of production were not readily ascertainable in determining a rate of change the commission could take into account invoice values, wholesale selling prices, transportation costs, and all other "relevant factors" entering into competition between foreign and domestic articles.

20,000 ATTEND DRY VICTORY GATHERING

SIX SOCIALISTS SEIZED

Boston, May 25 (A.P.).—A crowd of 20,000 men and women assembled in the Boston Garden today ot lend its support to a prohibition "victory" meeting held under the auspices of the Prohibition Loyalty League. Speakers called on the citizens of Massachusetts to "save the honor of the Commonwealth" by preventing repeal of the State prohibition act.

Prior to the start of the meeting, a group of young Socialists attempted to pass out handbills on which was printed the query: "Why worry about booze, when do we eat?" Six of them were arrested for violation of city ordinances. They were: Lawrence Cohen, jr., president of the Harvard Socialist Club; Samuel Levine, Charles Hill, Francis Rudnick, Carl Cartwright and Arthur Gordon. They were released later in $25 bail each.

Col. Raymond Robins, Socialist; Wilfred Grenfell, Clarence Demar, marathon runner, and Mrs. Jessie W. Nicholson, of Chevy Chase, Md., president of the Women's National Democratic League for Law Enforcement, were among the speakers.

Mrs. Nicholson attacked the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which she described as "one of the biggest bootleggers in America." She said the women of America awaited the action of Attorney General Mitchell "in prosecuting that association."

Col. Robins spoke chiefly on the prohibition problem as it applies to the Constitution of the United States, and argued that the law should be obeyed and enforced so long as it is part of the Constituion.

Gov. Frank G. Allen and former United States Senator William M. Butler were present, but did not speak.

161 Safety Boxes Looted in Bank

Proprietor of Hotel Held for Quiz in Connection With Robbery.

St. Louis, May 25 (A.P.).—Five burglars looted 161 safety deposit boxes in the vault of the Grand National Bank today and escaped with approximately $14,000 of the bank's cash as well as stocks, bonds, jewelry and other valuables belonging to box holders. No estimate was placed on personal losses by bank officials.

Morris "Sappho" Barnholtz, 52, proprietor of the Grand View Hotel, whose box in an adjoining vault was sliced out by the robbers, was arrested and held on $50,000 bond pending further investigation.

Entrance was obtained either by a duplicate key or through a hole in a brick wall, made to allow alterations.

MARINE ARRESTED IN DOUBLE MURDER

WIDOW ALSO IS HELD

Toms River, N. J., May 25 (N. Y. W. N.S.).—Giles Leon Bagwell, the fourth Marine Corps enlisted man involved in the investigation of the double murder that was the answer to the gin-andboredom life in the little garrison town of Lakehurst, N. J., last week, was taken into custody at his home in Pickens County, S. C., today.

The arrest of Bagwell brings the total number of persons taken into custody in connection with the murder of Robert Evans and Albert Duffy up to five. It was said at the office of the county prosecutor that a detective will be sent to Pickens County to bring Bagwell back. Extradition papers will not be necessary because Bagwell is listed as a deserter from the United States Marine Corps.

Evans, a recently discharged sailor, and Duffy, one of his friends, were riddled by rifle fire in the Evans bungalow in Lakehurst.

Mrs. Robert Evans, wife of one of the murdered men, is held as a material witness and has been examined several times by the ocean county authorities. It is believed that her association with one or more of the men held for the murder was responsible for the shooting.

Those Under Arrest.

Those under arrest, in addition to Mrs. Evans, are Privte Lester Underdown, Private Claude Edgar Carmichael, Private Madison Chappell and Private Bagwell, all attached to the Marine company at the naval air station.

Carmichael and Chappell were grilled by Detective Parker and Prosecutor James H. Davis today. After the questioning, Parker announced that Carmichael had admitted that he and Chappell had accompanied Underdown to the Evans bungalow, and that Underdown shot Duffy and Evans and then battered their heads in with two Army rifles smuggled from the Lakehurst barracks.

Carmichael, Detective Parker declared, said that he and his companion had been plied with liquor by Underdown, who then aske dthem to go with him to the Lakehurst home, where he was going to "bump off a couple of bums."

One of the two rifles missing from the Marine Barracks was found yesterday in the woods 200 feet from the Evans home. Its stock had been broken. Prosecutor Davis said that Carmichael had told him it was one of the rifles used i nthe murder and that he other was in a creek near the house.

Bagwell Denies Complicity.

Greenville, S. C., May 25 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—Giles Leon Bagwell, arrested at Easley, S. C., early today in connection with the double murder at Lakehurst, N. J., denied that he had any part in the killing, according to Sheriff J. E. Craig, of Pickens County, who made the arrest.

"I told Bagwell to go on and tell the whole truth as that was what the New Jersey people wished him to do," Sheriff Craig declared. "Bagwell replied that he was not guilty, but never did say that he knew nothing of the killings."

Bagwell, who has been in the Marines for about four years, arrived last night at the home of relatives at Easley. Sheriff Craig had been notified by Charles H. H. Schoffield, captain of New Jersey State police, to be on the lookout for Bagwell.

Bagwell said he only left Lakehurst about a day before his arrest, according to Sheriff Craig. He did not state, howeve, where he had been in the meantime. Bagwell told officers that he had nearly served his four-year term in the Marines and would have finished his enlistment period about June 1.

The couple were married in 1923 after a romance which began in Persia.

flanks gleaming in the sunrise rays while the city below was still shrouded in twilight and most.

People poured out into the streets, rushed to windows and climbed on the tops of their houses to watch the transatlantic visitor, which has already flown around the world, across the Equator, and into all four hemispheres, North, South, East and West.

Band Plays German Anthems.

Passing over the city, the Graf headed westward to Campo Dos Affonsos, where she came down from an altitude of about 1,000 feet under the escort of two military airplanes of the Brazilian army. The first landing cable slid over the side of the gondola, 300 feet up, at 7:10 a. m. (5:10 a. m. E. S. T.) and at 7:30 a. m. (5:30 a. m. E. S. T.) the landing was completed. A band played the German anthem.

The airship was made fast within twenty minutes from the time she dropped the first cable, and five minutes later the passengers landed.

Only a handful of persons were allowed to approach the airship.

Edwin V. Morgan, American Ambassador to Brazil, was among those waiting to see the dirigible. Gen. Mariante, commander of the Brazilian army aviation corps; Dr. Huber Knipping, German Ambassador to Brazil; Antonio Prado, prefect of Rio Janeiro, and several members of the Brazilian cabinet were others greeted by Dr. Eckener.

Twice Circles Capital.

At 8:40 a. m. (6:40 a. m., E. S. T.), Dr. Eckener had the land lines withdrawn for departure. Two minutes later the Graf rose slowly into the air, twice circled the city at slow speed and then sailed out of the headlands for Pernambuco.

Owing to the uncertainty of the Graf's landing here at all, all passengers from here for Lakehurst and Havana were sent by airplane yesterday to Pernambuco, where the Graf will pick them up tomorrow. They included W. B. Leeds, American millionaire, who came from the United States especially to make the return trip.

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—With 85,000 miles already to its credit and with the same motors it had when commissioned September 18, 1928, the Graf Zeppelin now faces at least seventeen flights in Europe, to give it a mileage of more than 100,000 at the end of the summer.

Tentative Itinerary Announced.

The Hamburg-American Line, booking agent for the Graf in America, today announced a tentative itinerary which will take the ship to points in almost every European country.

From July 8 to 11, a northland cruise to the North Cape at the extremity of Norway is scheduled. A week later another northland cruise to Spitzbergen, and the week after that a voyage to Iceland are planned. Flights to the Baltic and Mediterranean Seas are listed in addition to shorter trips.

The Zeppelin has crossed the Atlantic five times and the Pacific once, spanned Europe three times and Asia once, and on the present European-Pan-American tour has added the South Atlantic, Northern Africa and South America to its log.

FIVE KILLED IN TWO NEW YORK CRASHES

Two Youths Die When Train Strikes Car; Roosevelt Home Accident Scene.

AUTO SKIDS INTO TREE

New York, May 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A party of six youngsters out riding this afternoon in a new car belonging to one of them went past open gates at a grade-crossing at Atlantic avenue and 104th street, Richmond Hill, into the path of the Long Island Railroad Express speeding toward Jamaica. When the engineer saw them it was too late to stop, and too late for the car to go back, for the gate had dropped.

Two were killed, one is dying and the rest, one of them a 15-year-old girl, suffered somewhat less serious injuries. Those killed were Frederick Dierks, 20, and Walter Raynor, 17.

George Seif, 16, is in Jamaica Hospital suffering from a fractured skull, and is not expected to live.

The others were Muriel Starkin, 15, severe injuries as yet unascertained; Charles Marshall, 16, and Harry Tretola, 18. Th elast two were treated at Jamaica Hospital and later taken to the Richmond Hill Police Station where tney were questioned as to how the gate stood when the car went by it

According to witnesses the automobile had come to the crossing while the gates were down for a Brooklyn-bound train. As soon as it had gone by the gates were raised. As Dierks setarted forward over the east track to Jamaica, another express, Jamica-bound, dashed on the car and tossed it back to the side, a mass of wreckage. Arrests were expected tonight.

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 25 (N.Y.W.N. S.).—Three young men were killed and two others injured early this morning when their automobile, speeding from Albany skidded and crashed into a tree off the Albany post road in front of Gov. Roosevelt's home at Hyde Park.

The dead were Amerino Vellane, 21; John Longo, 22, and Louis Yiricek, 22, all of Yonkers. Michael Perena and Ernest Barberi, also of Yonkers, were taken to St. Francis Hospital, Poughkeepsie, suffering from minor injuries and shock.

MEXICAN QUOTA BILL VETO IS REQUESTED

U. S. Chamber of Commerce in Southern Capital Wires Hoover.

MEASURE HELD UNWISE

Mexico City, May 25 (A.P.).—The executive committee of the American Chamber of Commerce today made public the text of a telegram sent to President Hoover describing the Harris bill to put Mexican immigration under quota laws as "most unwise at this time."

The telegram said:

"In view of the present cordial and friendly relations between the United States and Mexico, it is the opinion of the executive committee of the American Chamber of Commerce of Mexico City, endeavoring to represent American business interests and to further these friendly relations, that the proposed legislation restricting immigration from Mexico would not to actual good and would be most unwise at this time.

"Nothing should be done to affect adversely this amicable feeling, and such legislation will also be inimical to trade and the friendly relations of the two countries."

The committee thought that "to pick oupt Mexico as the only country of the Western World for putting into effect such restrictions will inevitably produce most unsatisfacttory results. We sincerely hope that our legislative body will carefully consider the situation from every standpoint.

"Permit us to express the hope that the prospects of the restrictive proposals being enacted into law are remote, but in the event the measure should be passed and reaches you for signature, we respectfully and with deep interest recommend your thoughtful consideration to its veto."

MEDAL WINNER

LIEUT. W. A. MATHENY.

MATHENY WILL GET HERO AWARD TODAY

BATTLED FIRE IN JUNGLE

The Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, F. Trubee Davison, will present the Cheney Award to Second Lieut. William A. Matheny, of the Air Corps, at 10 o'clock this morning at Bolling Field.

The award, which is given annually, will be presented to Lieut. Matheny for an act of valor and self-sacrifice performed at Managua, Nicaragua, on August 30, 1929, when he rescued two of his flying companions from a burning plane which had been forced down in the jungles of the tropical country.

The account of the accident and the rescue of the flyers which was filed with Lieut. Matheny's official record in the War Department states that he was flying a plane about 7 miles out of Managua. One of the motors caught fire, and the pilot headed for the field, racing his other motor to reach there before the fire spread. The ramining motor "froze" on them and they were forced to land in a maze of tropical undergrowth and trees.

The plane crashed when it reached the top of the trees, falling to the ground and bursting the gasoline tanks. The whole machine was enveloped in roaring flame, with Lieut. Matheny and one of the companions saturated with the gasoline. The other passengers had been catapulted clear of the fire when the plane crashed.

Lieut. Matheny managed to crawl out of the wreckage, and then realized that the other man was pinned under the framework of the plane, exposed to the flames. He immediately started working to get to the man, regardless of the danger of himself with his gasoline-soaked clothing, and finally managed to rescue him, at the cost of several severe burns about his body.

A board of Air Corps officers appointed for the purpose of selecting the recipient of the award were unanimous in selecting Lieut. Matheny.

The Cheney award was established three years ago in memory of Lieut. William H. Cheney, who was killed in an air collision at Foggia, Italy, during the World War. The donors are Mrs. Mary L. C. Scofield, of Petersboro, N. H., and her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Chaney Streeter. Both of them will be present at Bolling Field this morning to witness the presentation of the medal to Lieut. Matheny.

Budd Begins Trip To Advise Soviet

Great Northern President Will Study System of Russian Lines.

Chicago, May 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern Railway, is on his way to Russia to give the Soviets advice on railroad rehabilitation and construction. In Chicago h esaid today:

"I will go directly to Moscow to meet with Russian officials. It is my intention to visit almost all of their roads, particularly the newer lines, to Americanize the systems. I believe that I was asked to go there because climatic and topographical conditions of the Great Northern Railroad are similar to conditions there. It is likely that the Soviet may revamp its present system on lines established in America."

Mr. Budd will be accompanied by Homer Bassett, his secretary; Henry K. Dugan, civil engineer for the railroad; W. R. Wood, mechanical engineer, and John Budd, his son, who is a senior at Yale University. The party will sail from New York Wednesday and return by way of Vladivostok.

CANDIDATES TO FACE SENATE QUIZ TODAY

EXPENSES UNTOLD YET

(Associated Press.)

Costs of the recent Pennsylvania Republican senatorial primary will be sought today by the Senate campaign funds investigating committee in examination of the participants.

Secretary Davis, the winner, and Senator Grundy and Francis Bohlen, his defeated rivals, all have been called by the committee to submit details of their campaign expenditures in open session today.

A similar three-cornered senatorial primary in Pennsylvania four years ago led to the expenditure of more than $2,500,000 and resulted in the Senate's barring William S. Vare, the senator-elect. The Senate investigating committee reported at that time that the Vare ticket spent $765,000.

Pending the examination of the candidates, Chairman Nye, of the Senate committee, said last night he had heard of no untoward incidents in the bitterly contested Pennsylvania senatorial primary of last Tuesday which might necessitate inquiry.

All three candidates are expected to appear before the committee with itemized accounts of their campaign costs. There have been no intimations of the extent of the expenditures in the primary race.

Senator Nye made it clear last night that neither her nor his committee was setting up any yardstick by which to measure campaign expenditures and to limit the spenders.

"Our duty is to investigate and determine the amounts spent," said Senator Nye. "It is up to the Senate to say whether these expenditures are excessive."

TREASURY ATTACKED ON HUGE TAX REFUND

Garner Cites "Negligence" in $33,000,000 Return to United States Stele.

ASKS COURT DECISIONS

(Associated Press.)

A charge that the Treasury Department was "guilty of gross negligence in its failure" to let the courts decide the merits of the recent $33,000,000 tax refund on 1918 taxes to the United States Steel Corporation was made yesterday by Representative Garner, of Texas, the House Democratic leader.

Asserting the Government lost at least $9,000,000 and possibly $26,000,000 as a result, the Texan said the American taxpayers were entitled to demand that tax refund matters be adjudicated by the courts.

Attacking in a statement the method by which the Treasury Department decided tax refunds, Representative Garner said the rule by which the refunds were made to the United States Steel Corporation was erroneous in principle and that a halt should be called. He noted that his resolution to authorize an investigation of the Treasury Department tax refunds actions had not been considered by the House rules committee to which it has been

It was evident, Garner said from a recent decision by the United States Court of Claims in the Packard Motor Car Co. case against the Government, that a loss of $9,000,000 occurred in the steel corporation refund on 1918 taxes, as, he added, the same issues were involved.

"Application of the same principles to the $26,000,000 refund to the United States Steel Corporation on 1917 taxes would have saved the Government $17,000,000," the Texan continued. "In my opinion, the Treasury Department has been guilty of gross negligence in its failure to bring those controverted matters into the courts

The steel corporation's refund was based on an opinion of former Solicitor Gregg, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, who Garner said, later declined to approve it.

Fund to Aid Study Of Unemployment

Julius Rosenwald Donor of $75,000 for Survey in Philadelphia.

Chicago, May 25 (A.P.).—The Julius Rosenwald Fund today announced a $75,000 appropriation for a study of the causes of seasonal unemployment in the Philadelphia area and the development of means to regulate employment that may benefit the entire Nation.

The experience of one large industrial district, where much work has already been done, will be to the advantage of other communities."

The study will require three years and will be carried out by the University of Pennsylvania's industrial research department under the direction of Prof. Joseph H. Willets. The bureau of regularization of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, the Federal Reserve Bank, board of education, State department of labor and industry, charitable agencies, trade associations and unions and Swathmore and Haverford Colleges will cooperate.

Newly Discovered Planet Will Bear Name of Pluto

Lowell Observatory Scientists Decide Roman God of Regions of Darkness Has Best Claim to Sun's Farthest-Flung Satellite.

Flagstaff, Ariz., May 25 (A.P.).—"Pluto" has been selected by scientists of Lowell Observatory here as the name for the recently discovered transneptunian body, which they believe is the long-sought Planet X. The name is symbolic of the comparatively dark and distant regions through which the celestial body rides on its orbit about the sun.

The announcement was made by Roger Lowell Putnam, trustee of the observatory and nephew of the late Dr. Percival Lowell, founder of the observatory, who predicted the existence of Planet X sixteen years ago after extensive mathematical research. On January 21 last scientists here saw a tiny speck of light which they announced last March was the Planet X.

Mr. Putnam, who came here from Springfield, Mass., to participate in the official naming of Planet X, revealed that the name "Pluto" was selected after the host of suggested names had been narrowed down to three—Minerva, Pluto and Cronus.

"We felt," said Mr. Putnam, "that the line of Roman gods for whom other planets are named should not be broken, and we believe that Dr. Lowell, whose researches led directly to its discovery, would have felt the same way.

"The discovery of this planet is so preeminently a triumph of reasoning that Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, would have been our choice if her name had not for so many years been borne by an asteroid."

"Cronus, the son of Uranus and the father of Neptune, would have been appropriate, but so is Pluto, the god of the regions of darkness where planet X holds sway. Jupiter and Neptune already are in the heavens and it seems particularly appropriate that the third brother should have a place."

Asserting all planets have symbols which frequently are used instead of their entire name, Mr. Putnam said "Pluto" lends itself easily to the monogram "PL," the initials of Percival Lowell, and "would be a fitting memorial to him."

"We therefore felt," Mr. Putnam concluded, "that Pluto is the proper name for the planet and are so suggesting to the American Astronomical Society and the Royal Astronomical Society."

Mr. Putnam said plans were to withhold announcement of the selection until the chosen name has been presented to the two astronomical societies and an official bulletin issued by Harvard University, but that a premature report of the naming had escaped through the personnel of a printing office. This caused the observatory officials to change their plans and issue the official announcement through the Associated Press last night.

BONDS VARY LITTLE DURING PAST WEEK

Easier Money Rates Fail to Push Issues Toward Higher Ground.

RAILS SCORE ADVANCES

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The bond market has put another quiet trading week behind it, making little progress toward erection of the strong price structure expected in a period of easy money.

As in the previous week, the list vacillated and its deportment has given traders little reason to hope for a pronounced immediate constructive movement. In fact, in some quarters some concern was shown as to whether the kind of market considered of vital important to business recovery will appear before trading passes into the usual summer doldrums.

The course of the market has shown the absence of a permanent stimulating force. Prices pulled both ways last week with little gain or loss. Railroad bonds were the best performers and many now are near the 1930 peak, in a position to establish a new top with any real encouragement. Intervals of firmness in most of the investment department, however, have been sporadic and have lacked definiteness.

Stock privilege issues are still most in favor with investors.

New financing last week was swelled by the public offering of $60,000,000 in the new Treasury bills and the total showed the sizable volume of $174,653,000, a decline of about $15,000,000 from the previous week, but five times the volume of the same period in 1929. A year ago the bond market was slipping toward the bottom of its long decline and most of the new financing was being done in stocks on the strength of the bull market for equity issues.

Foreign bonds were firm in quiet trading. The group did little but mark time in expectation of the German issue of which this market is to get $852,500,000. The coupon rate has not been definitely determined, but 5½ per cent is rather generally expected, with the bonds priced to yield a little more than 6 per cent.

The list lost its most active issue last week as conversion of the American Telephone stock privilege 4½s was virtually completed. At the close of business Friday only $12,000,000 of the original $219,000,000 offering remained unconverted and it is expected that this small volume will result in a thin market for the bonds still outstanding. These debentures were the life of the listed market during the dull months last summer, frequently accounting for 25 per cent or more of a single day's business.

RENOMINATION of the Hon. Carter Glass without opposition is no sign that Harry Flood Byrd, former Governor of the Old Dominion, has given up all idea of coming to the Senate.

IN Virginia the realization of senatorial and other political ambitions is arranged in a most polite, considerate and delicate manner. Down there gentlemen are averse to going into verbal clinches and rolling about in the dust and grime of political battle to the death.

Their destinies in statesmanship are fixed, not by the outcome of combat, but by negotiation, conciliation and brotherly love one for another. That is to say, if one chooses to be brutally frank in discussing a matter ordinarily placed on a lofty plane, they are "machined" into their foreordained stations.

And that is to say, the Virginia Democratic machine works with a well-oiled, high-speed and noiseless precision unsurpassed by any other similar mechanism of all history since Pericles ward-bossed the Athenians and Machiavelli put over his maneuvering.

SENATORIAL promotion in the commonwealth famous as the mother of Presidents comes by turn, by favor and by seniority.

Naturally, being high-born, knightly and neighborly Southern gentlemen, no aspirant raids another individual's family Bible, plucks forth the page bearing the record of his birth date and triumphantly exclaims: "See there! You are, politically speaking, in the sere and yellow leaf. It's time for you, a Methuselah full of honors and dignities, to make way for me so young and yare!"

In fact, the aspirant says exactly the opposite, especially if the person blocking his way makes no proud parade of his birth date. "You are going stdong," he declares, "and I'm for you! You have many long and fruitful years in office ahead of you."

* * * *

HE hands out this courtly homage with all the better grace because the boys who stoke, oil and accelerate the machine are reminding him: "Your turn will come. Your turn is sure to come. In the natural course of human events it is bound to come, the Ponce de Leon search for the Fountain of Eternal Youth having been a complete and lasting flop!"

Thus reassured, cheered and heartened, what man in the prime of life can not resign himself to machine-made patience and politeness? The thing is as simple as lying on one's back with the mouth of ambition wide open waiting for the ripe fruit of nomination to drop.

And as long as gentlemen are parts of the machine, how can their future go wrong or their ambitions fail?

Detective, Black Hand Foe, Disarms Meeting by Trick

Special to The Washington Post.

Beloit, Wis., May 25.—Living peacefully as owner and operator of the Interstate Oil Service Station across the Rock River, a block from the Illinois line, is a man who for years was recognized as one of the most effective detectives in the Middle West—a man who joined the "Black Hand," notorious Sicilian criminal society, for the purpose of studying it. He later broke up the organization here through his ability to "see guilt."

It is five years since newspapers announced that the "ace of crime investigators" had resigned the post of chief of detectives after fourteen years of service, but Daniel G. Torrisi remembers the details of his numerous exploits, many of which are so amazing that one would suspect fabrication were it not that his stories are substantiated by police records, associates and newspaper men.

As a direct result of Torrisi's work five "black hand" murderers are serving life terms, the organization has been driven out of Beloit and many lesser crimes have been solved that had been given up by police.

Short and stocky of build, ruddy of complexion, Torrisi suggests physical and mental strength and energy. When first questioned about his detective work he was reticent. But as conversation led him back to his more strenuous days his eyes flashed and he rapidly related, with a slight Italian accent but in a full English vocabulary, tales of murders and clues and battles with armed desperadoes.

Torrisi insisted that his ability as a detective was inborn. At 14, in 1902, he immigrated to Pennsylvania. Joe Petrosino, detective in New York, was his hero. When Petrosino was shot in Sicily while preparing a safe passage for former President Roosevelt, the young man was incensed with bitterness, against the "Black Hand" and resolved to devote his life to fighting them.

Joins "Black Hand."

Torrisi joined the "Black Hand" and won the confidence of the gang; then arrested seventeen. When marked for death he decided to "go west," geographically rather than figuratively. At Beloit he obtained police work as an interpreter.

Torrisi again joined the "Black Hand" and was exposed by refusing to approve the society's disciplinary methods. He was assessed $100 for objecting and was to pay at the next meeting. One rule of meetings was that all men were to disarm. Torrisi carried two guns, however, and turned over only one when the call came to "undress." When all the other guns and knives were in the baskets he pulled his remaining gun, he said, and forced the company to disband.

From then on there was open warfare. The "traitor" was threatened with death. He walked home by a different route every night. He laid a revolver alongside his cutlery in restaurants. When he opened a door he had one hand on the knob and the other on a gun. He took a protected apartment over a downtown office building.

Drove Out Gang.

"The reason they never shot me, probably, is that they knew that if they did one of them would die, too," he said.

One after another of the gang became involved in crimes and was driven out or sent to prison, largely by evidence produced by the former associate.

"How did you get the evidence?" he was asked.

"Well, that was easier to do than to explain," was the reply. "Of great importance was the confidence of people who refused to give police what clues they had for fear of reprisal but knew that I could protect them."

As an example, police had worked on a crime for six days without a clue, he said. Finally he was sent for and went directly to a gambler. The gambler readily admitted that he had agreed to hide the criminal in the back seat of his car until he got across the State line, adding that "you can have the police arrest us if you want to and get him that way."

"I Read the Man."

"I can read the man," is Torrisi's only explanation for his right "hunches." I have a part interest in a dance hall. We don't use pass-out checks. I can always tell who paid when they come in again. There is a guilty look in their eyes if they haven't, and I say 'go back and buy a ticket.'"

The victim of a black hand murder had whispered "Joe" as he died. Some time after, Torrisi said, he saw a man who he decided was the murderer. He went up to him and said, "Is your name Joe?" The man answered "Yes." "All right. Follow me. You are under arrest." The man later pleaded guilty.

At the funeral of another murdered Italian Torrisi noticed that one of the pallbearers wept a great deal and kissed the dead face. He became suspicious and told a policeman. "There is the murderer." Jim Cornevale, the sobbing pallbearer, was arrested soon after and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Torrisi worked on the theory that every criminal makes at least one mistake. When seventeen houses were robbed without a single clue he merely shrugged his shoulders. Three more homes were robbed. Police found an old sock by a window and threw it in a waste basket as of no value. Torrisi retrieved it and traced the thief by a laundry mark.

Many criminals go unpunished because police do not recognize evidence, Torrisi said. "What is the use of finding gold when you think it is iron?" he asked.

Bluffed Huge Knifer.

While Torrisi has been aided by a reputation for great physical strength and dexterity with a revolver, his greatest source of unbounded self-confidence is his "moral persuasion." At one time he and three officers went to arrest a dangerous gunman. The first to enter was driven out. The others refused to go in. Torrisi went in unarmed, calling on the murderer to surrender. The man replied: "All right, I'll go with you. But I wouldn't go with those other skunks."

On another occasion he confronted a huge Negro. The Negro drew a knife. Torrisi grabbed the man's wrist and pulled out his own gun. The Negro in turn grabbed his wrist. Torrisi pulled the trigger three times. The gun did not fire. Notwithstanding, the Negro surrendered when Torrisi said, "Let go or I'll pull the trigger and shoot you."

Torrisi found a pleasing lapse from the quiet monotony of the oil station last summer when the village of Rockton, Ill., established a "speed trap." Feeling that many motorists were unjustly treated, Torrisi arranged for one oil station at each end of the "trap" to put up signals. Large advertisements in Beloit and Rockford newspapers announced that a red flag by day or a red light by night should warn the motorists.

Seasonal Improvement in Outdoor Work Aiding Unemployed.

STEADY OUTPUT OF CARS

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—Business recovery appeared to be making the halting and dilatory progress during the past week which is characteristic of periods when the nadir of recession has been reached. Sentiment in both business and banking circles appeared to be improving, after the fit of pessimism induced by the failure of spring to bring a vigorous upturn. Definite signs of improvement are now rather confidently expected to appear sometime between midsummer and early autumn.

Factory activity, on the whole, showed the influences of the seasonal lull expected at this time, although the automobile manufacturers continued to operate their plants at a good rate, compared to a normal year such as 1928. Despite the slackening of factory work, the seasonal increase in outdor work has probably taken up some of the slack in employment.

Softening of commodity prices continues, although there is a fairly general feeling that they are scraping on bottom. The Annalist weekly index of wholesale prices showed a decline of about 1-3 of 1 per cent from the previous week, largely representing a sagging in fodstuffs. This remains one of the chief factors of unsettlement, as buyers naturally hesitate to make commitments while any prospect of a better bargain remains.

Recovery Seen as Likely.

Most observers believe, however, that both manufacturers' and dealers' inventories of goods are now so thoroughly deflated that substantial buying must appear in many lines before long. In any event, the stage seems to be set for a revival. A sustained upturn, however, may not be at once forthcoming. The buyers strike in the copper trade tended with enormous volume of buying during the past fortnight, but needs now appear to have been met, and the demand has slackened rather abruptly. Copper rallied from 12½ to 13 cents a pound, but chances of further recovery appear dim.

Steel mill operations sagged about 1 per cent during the week to below 75 per cent of capacity, and price unsettlement continues as a sore spot in this major industry. Prices of practically all products, from scrap steel and iron to semifinished and finished items, have been shaded further, and signs of renewed stability have not appeared. The demand for pipe line and heavy structural materials continues unabated, but farm impreement, railway equipment and machinery manufacturers are less active.

Automobile output has now reached a rate of slightly more than 100,000 units a week and has probably reached the seasonal peak, but basic conditions in the industry are generally described as sounder than they have been for several months. General Motors April sales report showed that deliveries to dealers were substantially less than dealers sales to consumers, indicating clearly that there is a determined effort to avoid any such troublesome piling up of dealers' stocks as resulted from the record breaking production early last year.

Freight Car Loadings Drop.

Freight car loadings as reported for the second week of May showed a decline of nearly 9,000 cars from the previous week, as compared to the jump of 36,000 cars shown in the previous weekly report. The movement of freight, however, can not be expected to show much improvement at this time of year. Despite the fact that car loadings figures this year have consistently held around the levels of 1924 or 1922, the net railway operating income reports appearing for April are showing a decline of only about 20 per cent from the like month of 1929, compared to an aggregate decline of more than 30 per cent in March.

Wheat futures rallied during the week, reaching the best levels since April 19, the hide market reversed the easing tendency of the previous week and wool showed some response to the firming tendency in foreign markets, but prices for other farm products generally continued to drag.

Textile markets were dull, and cotton mills have sharply curtailed output. Prices for cotton and woolen fabrics, however, held firm.

BULLS RULE STOCKS BY CLOSE OF WEEK

Trading Remains Very Dull as Expected Revival Fails to Mature.

LONG, QUIET PERIOD SEEN

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—A tired and dyspeptic stock market settled down to a protracted game of solitaire last week, and its spirits began to improve as the days drifted by, although at the end of the week it was still in no mood for ambitious undertakings.

Trading was at the lowest ebb since January, and commission house business was virtually at a standatill. Floor traders and professional operators who resisted the temptation to take a vacation, diverted themselves by alternate shifting from one side of the market to the other.

It was notable, however, that much of the widespread bearishness at the beginning of the week gradually shifted to restrained bullishness.

The price index of 90 representative shares showed an extreme loss of more than 4 points at the middle of the week, but by the end of the week this had been reduced to 7-10 of 1 point. The indices for 50 industrials and 20 rails were fractionally higher, but this was offset by a loss of more than 5 points in the index of 20 utilities.

Industrial Picture Unchanged.

The industrial picture was altered very little during the week and provided little impetus toward a revival of bullish market activity. A little more brightness here and there was counterbalanced by deeper shadows elsewhere. The very fact, however, that trends were so notably lacking encouraged many observers to believe that the business recession is now definitely scraping bottom.

With the summer period now approaching, there seems little likelihood of a marked turn for the better until late summer or early autumn.

While there was a rebound in late January of this year, it proved to be merely a technical reaction from the acute depression immediately after the crash of the securities markets, and although there was some seasonal improvement with the approach of spring it was admittedly disappointing.

Prospects for a substantial upturn at the next seasonal turning point, however, are believed to be better than they were during either of the past two periods. It usually takes about a year for a recession of the character of the current one to run its course, and although the stock market crash of 1929 did not occur until October, it will be recalled that moderate business recession began to appear in early summer of last year.

Steel Production Sags.

The week brought fairly cheerful reports from the automotive industry, which is believed to be enjoying a second quarter not unfavorable in comparison to the like period of 1928, a more normal year than 1929. Steel production, however, sagged further, and prices of steel products remained unsettled. Steel mill operations of between 74 and 75 per cent of capacity, however, are not much below those of this time in 1928, particularly if increased capacity is taken into account.

Railway net operating income reports for April, while substantially below those of April, 1929, are not showing such a severe drop as did those of March. Copper buying has lagged after the recent spurt, and Calumet & Hecla, Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range and Inspiration reduced their dividends. Despite the more optimistic reports from the automotive industry, Borg-Warner cut its dividend rate from annually $4 to $3. Stock split-ups returned to the news, with action by the directorates of American Machine & Foundry and International Salt.

Credit continued plentiful. Call loans held officially at 3 per cent, but time loan against stock market collateral were shaded further, reaching 3 per cent for the short maturities for the first time in several years. Mortgage money was also reported more plentiful, although residential building has as yet shown scant signs of recuperation.

MUSSOLINI CREDITS PROGRESS TO LABOR

150,000 Workers Hear Duce on Visit to Ancient City of Milan.

WORKMEN GET MEDALS

Milan, Italy, May 25 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini today addressed a crowd of 150,000 workers here, telling them that discipline of the laboring classes "firmly united around the symbol of the lictor's rods" is the element that is elevating Italy's economic situation above that of other nations. The men were gathered with their families in the great court yard of Sforza Castle, a structure built in the fifteenth century by Ludovico, Duke of Milan. The castle boasts priceless frescoes by Leonardo Da Vinci, and today was decked with the historic banners of Milan and nearby towns.

Cannon loaded with blanks kept firing salvos in honor of the duce's visit, throwing vari-colored pieces of paper over the crowd's heads. Powerful radios outside the courtyard filled the big park with Nationalist and Fascist airs.

"I feel perfectly tranquil and safe among this mass of workers," said the premier. "It is unnecessary to recount what the Fascist government has done for labor. We think of your interests, all your needs, because we love you as workers and fellow-Italians. Today's feast of labor shows how the rgeime respects labor and the workers."

After his speech Mussolini decorated 20 aged workmen and workwomen with the "Star of Labor." All those honored have worked 50 years for the same firms, and two 60 years. Previously the premier had attended mass in Balilla Stadium before 35,000 youngsters. He also watched their gymnastic competitions and reviewed all the younger forces of the Fascist party. There was a huge parade, blocking downtown traffic in Milan for nearly two hours. A brief session of cheering by Milan Fascists under the balcony of the city hall ended Mussolini's reception in Milan, the city recognized as the birthplace of the Fascist movement.

Distressed Tanker Aided In by Tugs

Huge Hole Torn in Her Bow by Collision in Fog Off Coast.

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The American oil tanker W. W. Bruce, sadly damaged last night in collision with another tanker, the Scottish Maiden, in a heavy fog 13 miles southeast of Barnegat lightship, limped into port today with the aid of two tugs. The Scottish Maiden, less seriously damaged, proceeded to Newport News, Va., a few hours after the accident.

The W. W. Bruce, with a hole 20 feet long and 19 feet wide, extending below the water line, in her port bow, discharged what was left of her cargo of 75,000 barrels of oil at Staten Island. Tomorrow she will be taken to drydock at Bayonne, N. J., for repairs.

Capt. John Burrow, of the Bruce, estimated the damage to his vessel at between $30,000 and $50,000. Seventeen thousand barrels of oil were pumped out to prevent the ship from sinking when it began to settle after the crash. The Bruce (formerly the Sabine Sun) is owned by the Continental Steamship Co.

U. S. Bullfighter Applauded, Booed

Sidney Franklin Kills First Animal Easily, but Has Trouble With Second.

Zaragoza, Spain, May 25 (A.P.).—Sidney Franklin, Spain's only American matador, was both applauded and booed in the bullring here this afternoon, during his third fight since he was gored at Madrid several months ago.

The Brooklyn bullfighter, after courageous and skillful cape-work killed his first bull, winning the applause of the "Aficionados." To dispatch the second bull, however, Franklin had to make five sword thrusts, failing four times to pierce a vital spot. This is considered by fans much as American fans consider fumbled footballs and muffed flies.

The spectators began to shout jokes and threw several cushions. The judge gave Franklin "first warning," which is an indication that the matador must hurry in killing the bull. If "third warning" is reached, which rarely happens, the matador is disgraced and his career ended. Franklin killed the bull before "second warning" came.

Long Elevated Railroad Across Sahara Planned

Paris, May 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Construction of a 1,500-mile elevated electric railroad across the Sahara Desert is under discussion in Paris. The project envisions a structure raised 12 feet above the shifting sands on concrete piers, protected from nomad tribes by high-tension electric wires. The estimated cost of the railroad is $117,000,000, or about one-twentieth of the French annual budget.

It is pointed out that carrying out of the project would open a new empire in France's African possessions. The Soudan, it is pointed out, is rich in timber and minerals. These, it is estimated, would in a few years pay for the construction of the railroad. Once the barrier of the Sahara is down the southward spread of Arabs would increase French strength in Africa.

On the Rules of Traffic

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

Use of a spotlight is prohibited for ordinary city driving in Washington. Since it is so readily adjustable, this type of lamp may be tilted to produce a glare not noticeable to the person driving the car.

The use of a spotlight is restricted to unlighted highways. There is the further requirement that the beam must strike the ground to the right of the center of the vehicle and not more than 100 feet ahead.

Example: A driver enters the city on the Seventh street pike and keeps his spotlight on as he drives down Sixteenth street. Though it is focused to strike the ground within the required distance, the use of the light is illegal because the thoroughfare is lighted.

20,000 SEE RITES FOR U. S. WAR DEAD

Churches. Then came the diocesan and cathedral clergy, while the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, was at the end of the procession.

Among those in the patriotic section of the procession were the Victory Post Drum Corps, the Vincent Costello Post Bugle Corps and the Overseas Band Drum and Bugle Corps, which played during a portion of the march. The D. A. R. group was headed by Mrs. David Caldwell, vice president general from the District of Columbia, representing Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the organizations. In the junior division were units of high school cadets. The congregation included Cabinet members, senators, representatives, members of the Diplomatic Corps and high ranking officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. Special seats were reserved for the disabled veterans from local service hospitals and the Gold Star Mothers.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter, canon and chancellor of Washington Cathedral, assisted by the Rev. Charles Dubell, of Philadelphia, national chaplain of the Military Order of the World War. Col. Julian E. Yates, chief chaplain of the U. S. Army, and Capt. Sidney K. Evans, head of the chaplains' division of the United States Navy.

Freeman Preaches Sermon.

The sermon which, as well as the service, was broadcast to unseen thousands by radio through WRC, was delivered by Bishop Freeman.

"The founding fathers of the republic," declared Bishop Freeman, "were actuated by principles of Christian idealism and the same lofty sentiments have been held by the majority of the men in the Army and Navy and Marine Corps of the United States since that time."

The bishop pointed out that America must always remember at what cost the prosperity, security and permanence of this country have been bought.

"The approach of another Memorial Day," continued the bishop, "brings vividly before us the heroic service and sairifice made by our loyal citizens in the great crises that have attended our development and progress as a Nation.

"To decorate the graves of our sailors and soldiers is a fitting tribute to their memory. To commit ourselves with high consecration to those ideals for which they gave their lives is a worthier expression of our gratitude.

Eulogy to War Dead.

"'Lest we forget!' is the solemn admonition which each recurirng Memorial Day lays upon us. We dare not think so little of our heroic dead as to believe that the sacrifices they made were without design or purpose. We should be unworthy recipients of what they have transmitted and secured to us did we not, with fidelity and devotion, address ourselves to those high aims for which they gave the last full measure of devotion," concluded the bishop.

One of the most impressive moments of the service came when "America" was sung by the congregation. Then Bishop Freeman offered a prayer for America's heroic dead.

Taps was sounded by Sergt. Frank Witchey, Headquarters Troop 3, United State Cavalry, who performed a similar service at the burial of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington in November, 1921. This was folowed by a moment of silence, broken by the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner," played by the United States Marine Band.

The committee of the Military Order of the World War, which was in charge of yesterday's arrangements was headed by Chaplain Arlington A. McCallum as chairman and Capt. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., as secretary.

Among the participating organizations were:

American Gold Star Mothers, American Legion, American Red Cross, American War Mothers, American Women's Legion, the Aztec Club of 1812, Boy Scouts of America, Children of the American Revolution, Colonial Dames of America, Costello Post Bugle Corps, Dames of the Loyal Legion, Daughters of American Colonists, Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of the Cincinnati, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

Manslaughter Verdict Ends Wife-Killing Trial

Mays Landing, N. J., May 25 (N.Y. W.N.S.).—Warren E. Cliff, 27, was convicted of manslaughter here yesterday on a charge of having killed his 19-year-old wife, Betty, by slashing her throat on the boardwalk last winter. Under the New Jersey law, the maximum penalty for manslaughter is ten years in prison.

The verdict, brought in by the jury after three hours of deliberation, was a compromise between the death penalty asked by the State on a first-degree murder charge and the plea of the defense counsel that Cliff was emotionally insane with jealousy at the moment of the killing. Cliff had accused his pretty wife of running around with other men.

Eight Die, 150 Escape In Chinese Prison Riot

Shanghai, May 25 (A.P.). — Dispatches eceivec here today from Amoy, Fukien Province, said eight were killed and many wounded in a mutiny of prisoners at the Amoy jail. One hundred and fifty of the prisoners were said to have escaped.

Amoy officials placed the blame on Reds, advancing the belief arms were smuggled to prisoners captured in recent anti-Communist raids here. The coup was made suddenly by the prisoners, who rushed and disarmed the guards and controlled the exits after a sharp fight.

SEWER BOND ISSUE OPPOSED BY EACHO

Officer of Back-to-District Association Calls for More Information.

STUDY ARLINGTON RATES

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 809. Clarendon, Va.

With a bond election of $2,173,089 for a sewer system to be held in three weeks, there should be some public expression by the board of supervisors as to their plans for the installation of the system should the bond issue pass, Richard L. Eacho, vice president of the Back-to-the-District Association, declared last night.

"The county board of supervisors are the ones to appear before the people inasmuch as they have asked the court to set the date for the election," he said.

"It is true that the surveys and all estimates have been made in the county engineer's office, but it does not seem altogether fair to call upon County Engineer C. L. Kinnier to make all explanations of how the funds will be expended and the plans for the installation of the system."

"We are not only being called upon to vote for a sewer bond issue of $2,173,089, but also a school bond issue of $640,000 and it is most unfortunate that the two elections are called for the same day. Taxes are high now, and bond issues can not be put over without increased taxes. If the voters of the county are not careful, taxes will be so high that the average homeowner will be unable to pay them," he said.

Mr. Eacho declared that he favored the bond issue for schools, but is of opinion that the county school board has not asked for sufficient funds to meet the future school needs of the county. As far as the sewer bond issue is concerned, he says he is unalterably opposed to it.

Organization of the newly appointed public utilities commission, which will work with the county board of supervisors in making a study of rates of public utilities of the county will be perfected at a meeting to be held at the county courthouse, it was learned last night.

Despite the fact that the commission has not yet held a meeting to elect officers, a study has been made, and is being continued of gas rates in Arlington County, claimed to be excessive. On completing this study it is understood that the commission will inquire into the electric light rates for Arlington County.

A mass meeting of residents of Lyon Park and vicinity, to hear County Engineer C. L. Kinnier explain the details of the proposed sewer bond issue, will be held at the Community House tomorrow night, according to Arthur Orr, president of the Lyon Park Citizens Association.

Although this is the night of the regular business meeting of the organization, consideration of the sewer bond proposal will be given precedence over all other matters.

"In view of the fact," Mr. Orr said, "that the tax levy of 30 cents which will be necessary to carry the bonds, will result in an increase of 12 per cent in each taxpayer's annual tax bill, and that in addition a flat sum of $10 per year in the form of a service charge must be paid, it is important that every voter attend this meeting that he may cast an intelligent ballot June 9."

There will be a meeing of the ladies' auxiliary to the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Austin, 818 Moore avenue, Clarendon.

The Clarendon Fire Department announces that plans are under way for its annual carnival beginning June 28 and continuing through July 4. The committee in charge of arrangements announces many new features for the program. The proceeds will be used to purchase needed equipment for the firemen.

The Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemen's Association will entertain and hold a reception for the auxiliaries of the Clarendon, Arlington, Cherrydale, McLean, Fairfax, Ballston, Herndon, Vienna, Falls Church, Jefferson District departments tomorrow night at the Jefferson District firehouse, Virginia Highlands. The committee in charge of the arrangements are: Robert E Kendrick, chairman; Roy F. Beckwith, and Herbert F. Smith.

The Ballston Council, No. 221, Junior Order United American Mechanics, will meet Wednesday night in the auditorium of the Ballston Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

Miss Audrey Cleveland has been elected president of the Epworth League of the Ballston Central Methodist Episcopal Church. Other officers are: Ernest Brooks, vice president; Mrs. Florence Loveless, treasurer; Miss Louise Taylor, secretary; and Miss Elsie May Finnell, recording secretary.

County Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green announces that his office will be open Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday nights of this week to assist taxpayers who have not as yet made out their personal property or State income returns. The office will be open from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Attention is called to the fact that Saturday night is the last day in which returns may be made out in order to avoid a penalty.

year, though the contracts for public buildings are 11 per cent less in value than those of last year, and declines have been registered in expenditures on new buildings for railroads, and in sewerage plant installations.

On the other hand, private residential construction in the United States during the first four months of the year, the department finds, is 49 per cent less than the 1929 volume, while industrial construction is 24 per cent under 1929, and commercial buildings 14 per cent less.

MINISTER DEPLORES CHURCH STAGNATION

Materialism Blinds World, Speaker at Presbyterian Assembly Says.

MISSION APATHY IS HIT

Charlottesville, Va., May 25 (A.P.).—The world today was pictured as in a mechanical age blinded by materialism by Dr. Neal L. Anderson, of Atlanta, in an address on stewardship before the Southern Presbyterian General Assembly here late today.

"Tired of its toys and the philosophy of comfort and culture, there is a greater desire than ever before to unveil spiritual mysteries," said Dr. Anderson.

He found an appalling situation resulting from stagnation in modern church work "at this golden hour of all history in the midst of a world that is spiritually bankrupt." Apathy in missionary interest has made workers wonder if they can maintain fields now open, the minister asserted.

His address was delivered at the only session today of the assembly attended by representatives of Presbyterian churches in the seven Southern and Southwestern States. A number of the delegates had not returned from Washington, where this morning they attended the dedication of the Church of the Pilgrims authorized by the assembly ten years ago.

Dr. William R. Dobyns, of Birmingham, Ala., retiring moderator, preached the dedicatory sermon.

Having spent the first three days of the annual convention in receiving reports from recess committees, the assembly tomorrow will begin consideration of standing committee recommendations on church union and other questions important to the church.

BODY OF MISSING JUDGE DISCOVERED

the quarry's crest disclosed a fragment of slippery bark, crushed as though by a foot. It was probable, Coroner Miller said, Judge Engs slipped on the bark and fell to his death.

Inquest Called for Today.

An inquest will be held tomorrow. Authorities said they were satisfied, however, that the death was accidental.

Judge Engs disappeared at the close of a sensational graft trial in Oakland. He had presided over the trial of Chief Criminal Deputy Sheriff A. R. Shurtleff, Deputy Sheriffs J. J. Poller and J. Lynn Davis, and Jack Gardella. All were indicted in connection with a grand jury investigation of an asserted Oakland paving graft ring and were suspected of taking thousands of dollars in bribes and protection money.

The men were tried before Judge Engs on conspiracy charges. All were convicted after the 57-year-old jurist disappeared. On Thursday, May 15, taking of testimony was concluded. That night he became ill and early the next morning he disappeared.

ALEXANDRIA IS HOST TO MASONIC REUNION

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

The George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple, now in course of erection, will be the scene of the fall reunion of Scottish Rite Masons, which will last three days, beginning today. The degrees, from the fourth to the thirty-first, will be confererd by members of the Scottish Rite bodies of Alexandria and the thirty-second will be conferred by Albert Pike Consistory, of Washington.

The class will assemble at 12:30 o'clock for registration. The conferring of the degree will begin at 1:15 p. m., and will be concluded by 6 o'clock, when dinner will be served in the dining hall of the Memorial Temple. At 7:30 o'clock the doors of the auditorium will be thrown open, and all Master Masons and their families will be invited to attend the entertainment and hear the speakers, who will be Senators Robinson and Capper. Robert South Barrett will act as toastmaster and introduce the speakers, and, in addition, there will be a musical program.

The Memorial Temple, which is expected to be completed in 1932, in time for the celebration of the bicentennial of George Washington's birth, was the scene last fall of the initiation of the largest Scottish Rite class ever inducted in Virginia, among those receiving the degrees being the then Governor of Virginia, Harry Flood Byrd.

It is expected that many out-of-town visitors will attend the three-day ceremonies, especially those of Wednesday. A large class of candidates will be on hand, and many Masons other than Scottish Rite, and their families, are expected to attend the celebration following the degree work.

Arguments before the State Corporation Commission in Richmond, starting at 10 o'clock this morning, on a motion of a rehearing of the case whereby the commission granted the application of the trolley and bus lines operating between here and Washington increased rates of fare, will be made by Harry F. Kennedy, representing the Alexandria Commuters Association.

The trolley and bus lines, which are owned by Robert L. May, of Alexandria, will be represented by Attorney Gardner L. Boothe, and the City of Alexandria, which is also opposing the increase, by City Attorney Carl Budwesky.

The increased fares recently granted by the commission are to go into effect June 1. Unless a rehearing is granted by the commission, it is expected that the case will be taken to the State Supreme Court of Appeals. The City of Alexandria will contend that the rate of 5 cents between all points within the corporate limits as set by the franchise given the electric line originally, can not be increased, but it is understood to be the contention of the commission that this rate, which was set prior to the formation of the corporation commission, automatically was vacated upon the organization of the commission which has the power of regulating rates of fare within the State. The new rate granted by the commission is 8 cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, and 15 cents between Alexandria and Washington, with eight tokens for $1.

The parsonage of St. Mary's Catholic Church, at 310 Duke street, will be extensively remodeled this summer, according to the Rev. T. A. Rankin, pastor. The interior of the structure will be remodeled completely, only the four walls of the present building being left standing.

While the work is in progress the priests in charge will use the building at 318 North Washington street, the home of the Xaverian Brothers, as a parsonage. The work is expected to be started the latter part of June, and will require several weeks to complete.

Harry D. Gasson, aged 55 years, died yesterday afternoon at his home on Seminary Hill, after an illness of one week. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian D. Gasson, and three children, the Rev. Henry Dymoke Gasson, of Brazil; Edward Gasson, of Princeton University, and Mrs. Albert V. Bryan, of this city. The deceased was born in Louisville, Ky., but lived in Washington for a number of years before moving to Alexandria about fifteen years ago.

ACTIVE CURB ISSUES SLUMP DURING WEEK

Few Shares Display Better Tone by Saturday; Sales Very Dull.

OILS STAGE LATE RALLY

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The curb market was extremely dull and unsettled during most of the past week. Stocks developed a better tone late in the week, but the more active issues generally ended the period moderately below the levels prevailing at the end of the previous week. The average day's turnover was well below 800,000 shares.

The oil shares were depressed by the difficulties in reaching an agreement on curtailment at the Santa Fe Springs fields in California, but rallying tendencies developed late in the week. Such issues as Gulf, Humble and Vacuum sold off substantially. Cities Service was active, but moved narrowly.

The utilities were under considerable pressure during the early session. Electric Bond & Share declined close to 96, but this group rallied late under new leadership, provided by Niagara Hudson, American Commonwealth B and Central States. Niagara Hudson was stimulated by renewed gossip in brokerage circles regarding the prospect of an early alignment with Consolidated Gas of New York.

The natural gas issues held fairly steady in moderately active trading. National Fuel reached new high ground and Lone Star and American were firm in response to disclosure of merger negotiations. Duquesne, a newcomer, was firm and fairly active.

In the industrial and specialty division weak features were Deere and Technicolor. Deere dropped several points in response to reports indicating a falling off in farm implement demand, together with some cancellation of orders, but was well supported after getting down around 128. Technicolor dropped to a new 1930 low at 51, compared to its 1930 peak of 86½, but then made moderate recovery.

The Pacific Coast Biscuit issues were in demand, rising to new 1930 high ground, in sympathy with strength of National Biscuit on the big board. Hygrade was another firm feature in the food shares. An interesting transaction was a sale of ten shares of Great Lakes Dredge at 260, an advance of 116 points since the previous transaction, which was in January.

New issues making their appearance included the new split-up shares of American Machine & Foundry and International Salt, admitted to trading on a when-issued basis.

Danville Church Plans Dedication Services

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., May 25.—With the last vestige of debt wiped out when notes aggregating $3,000 were burned at special services Friday night, the officials and congregation of Sledd Memorial Presbyterian Church are making preparations for dedication of the church next Sunday.

A denominational rule, which forbids dedication as long as there is a debt outstanding, accounts for the fact that the church was not previously been dedicated. The Rev. John W. Rustin, a former pastor, who paved the way for the new church building and who now holds a charge at Salisbury, Md., will conduct the dedication.

Averett College Class Hears Baccalaureate

Means, pastor of Main Street Methodist Church, in the annual baccalaureate sermon. The college finals began last night with a busy program spreading over three days in prospect.

Dr. Henry Alfred Porter, of Charlottesville, will make the address at the final exercises at the college Tuesday night.

Her first husband was the Rev. Hanning Foggy, the first Southern Methodist minister in this territory. Her second husband, Judson B. Suiter, died a number of years ago. Mrs. Phoebe C. Rowan, Beverly, is her sister.

Two Autoists Arrested On Another's Charges

Two colored persons were arrested yesterday by Prince Georges County officials on complaint of a man who said they had deliberately collided with his machine while it was stuck in the mud. He also charged that they threatened him and his wife, that they used abusive language and that they drove their car while drunk.

Those arrested were Paulet Owens, colored, 23 years old, of Mitchellville, Md., and Annie ebron, colored, about 38 years old, of Davidsonville, Md. The complainant, James amliton, jr., said that the incident happened on the road between Mitchellville and Davidson. The prisoners were arrested by State Policeman W. T. Booker and County Policeman Nichols, who are searching for a third man said to be concerned in the fracas.

MAN FATALLY HURT WHEN HIT BY AUTO

terday morning. Her injuries are lacerations of the head and scalp, a possible fracture of the skull and possible internal injuries. Mrs. Edward H. Zoller, 40 years old, of the same address, who figured in the same crash, received only a laceration over the left eye.

The accident happened when the car in which the woman was riding, which was driven by Edward Zoller, of the Thirtieth street address, was struck head-on by a car driven by Birger C. Boyd, 40 years old, of Thirteenth street near C street southwest. According to Maryland police, Boyd failed to stop after the accident. He was caught after a 2-mile chase by State Officer Booker and charged with driving while drunk, intoxication and failing to stop after colliding.

Miss Rozella Slaughter, 25 years old, of 1705 Lanier place northwest, is in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital after an auto crash on the Wheeler road several miles from the District line early yesterday morning. Her injuries were diagnosed as a possible fractured skull.

Miss Slaughter, who is a clerk in the Department of Agriculture, was riding in a car driven, by E. L. Jeffers, 38 years old, of 1377 Massachusetts avenue southeast, who suffered lacerations of the nose. Both the injured were taken to the hospital in the car of Miss Justine Crosser, daughter of Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio, who was returning from a dance in Maryland which the injured couple had also attended. It was said the accident resulted from failure of the steering gear of Jeffers' car, which caused the auto to leave the road and strike a stump.

George L. Goodenough, 21 years old, of 466 E street southwest, received lacerations of the scalp and a possible fractured skull when a car in which he was riding was in a head-on collision with another opposite the gate of St. Elizabeth's Hospital. At Casualty Hospital it was said his condition was serious.

John A. McClain, 42 years old, of 36 U street northwest, was painfully injured yesterday afternoon when the automobile which he was driving collided with another driven by Ernest H. Abt, 48 years old, 1522 Ogden street northwest, at the intersection of Seventeenth and S streets northwest.

McClain was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where it was found that his left hand was almost completely severed from his arm, and doctors there were forced to amputate the hand. It was thought that his hand was cut while holding it out the window of his car.

His wife and 12-year-old child were with him in the collision, but escaped injury. Abt, who is a stock broker of this city, was not held by police of the Eighth Precinct, who investigated the accident.

Another accident resulted in injuries almost identical with McClain's. Ernest Cheek, 35-year-old colored man, living at 1114 T street northwest, has a badly lacerated hand and arm which resulted from a collision at Tenth and R streets northwest.

William Ball, colored man, living on Chesapeake street near Thirteenth street northwest, was driving the car, and swerved to avoid hitting a car driven by William Washington, another colored man, living at 12 R street northwest. His car turned over on its side, pinning Cheek's hand under the door of the car. He was taken to Freedman's Hospital.

Ball was arrested by police from the Second Precinct, and charged with reckless driving.

Frank Bottazzi, 49 years old, of 410 Seventh street northwest, was taken to Garfield Hospital after an accident at Fourteenth and Irving streets northwest last night. He was said to have undetermined injuries to the left leg and shoulder. He remained at the hospital overnight. Botazzi was struck by a car driven by Francis A. Woodward, 52 years old, of 1821 Kilbourne place northwest, as he was crossing the street, police said.

Two persons were injured, one seriously when two automobiles came together at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northeast yesterday. Both were colored. Ralph Saunders, 5 years old, suffered a possible fracture of the skull, while Edna Saunders had two fingers broken. They were riding in an automobile driven by James E. Saunders, Negro, of Fifty-seventh street northeast.

Boy Snatches Purse Containing $5.

Miss Effie Gulick, of 2403 Fourteenth street northwest, told police yesterday that while standing at Fourteenth and Euclid streets a small colored boy snatched her pocketbook containing $5 from her hand.

17 TROPHIES ADDED FOR HORSE EVENTS

Many Prizes Will Be Given Winners in Culpeper Show July 4 and 5.

MEDAL FOR YEARLINGS

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 25.—Seventeen new trophies, silver plates, have been added to the prize list of the Culpeper Horse Show and Racing Exhibition, which will have its twenty-sixth annual renewal here July 4 and 5. Ribbons and the customary cash awards will also be given to the winners in the 24 classes scheduled for those days.

The Virgina Horse Breeders Association has offered a medal to be given in a special class for yearling colts, bred in Virginia and Jefferson County, W. Va., suitable to become hunters. This should bring in a large number of competitors because of the revival of interest in fox hunting in this section during the past few years.

The feature event scheduled is the Hunter championship, for the Culpeper Challenge Plate, which must be won three times by the same owner to secure permanent possession. Only horses which have won blue ribbons during the how are eligible for this class and all points, type, conformation and performance are considered in making the award.

Five Races Each Day.

The former plate was won in 1925 by C. H. Carrico, and in 1926, 1927 and 1928 by Mrs. D. N. Lee, of Middleburg, who recently had several wins at the Baltimore show. Last year a new plate was offered by the business men of Culpeper and Mrs. Lee won the event for the fourth successive time. Her entry, Broken Glass, swept the board in the Virginia shows last year.

Five races are set for each day, with steeplechase for the climax of each day's racing card. These jumping races are run over a long course, which is a severe test of a horse's endurance.

The officers of the Culpeper Horse Show Association are: John S. Covington, president; J. G. Williams, and P. H. O'Bannon, vice presidents; F. D. Gaskins, manager, and R. W. Huffman, secretary. Mr. Huffman, who has been secretary for several years, said today that judging by the requests for information received to date there would be more horses in the show this year than there were in 1929, when there were nearly 500 entries in the show classes alone.

List of Show Classes.

The following is the list of show classes: 1, suckling colts; 2, half-bred yearlings; 3, half-bred 2-year-olds; 4, special class for yearlings suitable to become hunters; 5, brood mares; 6, children's ponies, to be ridden by children under 13; 7, ponies over 12 hands, to be ridden by children under 14; 8, jumping ponies under 12 hands, to be judged as children's ponies; 9, jumping ponies over 12 hands to be ridden by children under 16; 10, saddle horses that have not won blue ribbons prior to 1930; 11, saddle horses, open to all; 12, ladies' saddle horses, to be ridden by ladies; 13, road hacks, to be shown at walk, trot and hand gallop, then to jump not to exceed 3½ feet; 14, 3-year-old hunters over 3½-foot jumps; 15, 4-yeear-old hunters over 4-foot jumps.

Sixteen, green hunters; 17, lightweight hunters carrying 150 pounds over jumps not to exceed 4½ feet; 18, middle and heavyweight hunters carrying 175 pounds over jumps not to exceed 4½ feet; 19, ladies' hunters, to be shown over jumps not to exceed 4 feet; 20, Corinthian class, open to all hunters, to be ridden in hunting colors, in and out jumps 4 feet high and 21 feet apart; 22, hunters and jumpers, open to all, best performance over jumps at 4 feet to win; 23, touch and out, jumps at 4 feet, to be raised in case of tie; 24, the hunter championship for the Culpeper Challenge Plate, open to all class winners.

TRIAL INDEPENDENCE.

A favorable report has been ordered by the Senate committee on territories on the Hawes-Cutting bill to provide trial independence for the Philippine Islands. The bill calls for a convention to frame a constitution for early submission to the Filipino people for their approval; for approval or disproval by the Congress of the United States; for modified trade relations with the United States pending complete independence and for the abolition of American sovereignty after five years, provided the Filipino people declare themselves satisfied with their "trial independence." In the first year following approval of the new constitution, trade between the islands and the United States would continue on a free basis. In the second year, 25 per cent of the general American tariff rates would be charged against products of the islands; in the third year, 50 per cent; in the fourth year 75 per cent, and in the fifth year and thereafter the full American tariff would apply against Philippine products.

Aside from the fact that the Filipinos are not yet able to organize or maintain a stable government and that serious consequences probably would ensue in the trial period, stands the fact that Filipino industry, thriving under the stimulus of exemption from the American tariff laws, would be unable to accommodate itself to the pressure of standing unprivileged so far as its exports to its principal market are concerned.

Secretary Stimson appeared before the committee on territories while it was considering the Hawes-Cutting measure to oppose immediate independence, on the ground that it would be disastrous to the Filipino people and disastrous also to the interests of the United States, both in the islands and in the Far East. Secretary of War Hurley, in a letter addressed to the committee, said:

> It is believed that the granting of complete independence at this time would be disastrous alike to the ultimate interests of both the Filipino and American people; that no diminution of American control in the islands, below that which may be properly effected under the present organic act, should be brought about while the responsibility incident to American sovereignty in the Philippines continues; and that it would be inexpedient and hazardous to attempt to anticipate future developments by fixing any future date for ultimate independence.

The proposal to raise the hopes of the Filipino people by giving them a five-year period of "trial independence" is highly impractical and mischievous. The bill proposes to restore the present organic act in case the plebiscite should be adverse to independence. But the great majority of the inhabitants of the islands are utterly incompetent to decide wisely by their own votes what kind of government they should have. Under the bill, the Philippines would be subjected to a dangerous strain for five years, during which the United States would be neither in nor out of control. The direction of affairs would be in untrained and irresponsible hands, with no regard for the international responsibilities of the United States in the Far East. Then, on the mere expression of the Filipinos in favor of complete independence, the United States would be forced to grant it, even at the cost of a foreign war, to prevent the collapse of independence through foreign aggression.

No more foolish or impracticable plan for dealing with the Philippines has ever been presented. It is idle to argue that the Filipinos should be taken at their word and be subjected to an "acid test of trial independence." The interests of the United States, as well as the interests of the Filipinos, are involved in this question. The United States would be foolish, indeed, to subject its relations in the Far East to the ignorant and irresponsible direction of Filipinos experimenting with government.

Whenever the Filipino people are capable of maintaining a government of their own they will get it. No American relishes the task of administering the Philippines. The question of independence, however, is vastly more complicated than is realized by the authors of this bill. All that they have accomplished is to produce an ideal plan to be avoided.

THAT LAZY STREAK.

The controversy on Capitol Hill over the introduction of the dial telephone system goes to prove that laziness is one of mankind's major characteristics. Nobody likes to do any more work than is absolutely necessary, especially when it comes to manual labor—and legislators are by no means an exception. They are perfectly willing to tell the operator to get a certain telephone number for them, but when it comes to running a finger around on a telephone dial a few times—that's asking too much of an overworked lawmaker.

Evidently the telephone company didn't count on this inherent quality of laziness in the average individual. Henry Ford did, and as a result made millions because he recognized that people were too lazy to walk. McCormick knew that most farmers disliked to hoe, plow, thresh and do their reaping by hard manual labor, and as a result he, too, reaped millions. Why has the sale of ready-to-wear clothing grown so enormously of late years? Why do the delicatessen shops and the big bakeries do such an enormous business, when a few years back such institutions were practically unknown? Simply because most women find it too much trouble and work to sew for themselves or bake bread and cake.

If the telephone company hopes for success with the new dial system it looks as if it must find some means of overcoming or circumventing the lazy streak in all of us.

TELEVISION.

The first commercial demonstration of life-size television, made this week by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, of the General Electric Co., in a Schenectady theater, holds a promise that practical home television is not far distant. Heretofore television reception has been on a minute scale and every effort to enlarge the size of the image has resulted in its destruction. The images received in the Schenectady demonstration were equal in size to the images thrown on the screen by the early motion picture cameras. Science will be able to iron out their few imperfections; practical theater television is just around the corner, and it may be that television in the home is equally near at hand.

Commercially, television has limitless possibilities, but, like radio, its commercial development will be closely tied to its entertainment value. Borrowing from the story of radio, its developers will attempt to popularize the home receiving outfit. But, as compared with the audible radio receiver, the visual receiver is a most complicated piece of apparatus. It will be expensive to purchase and subject to breakdowns and hence, in all probability, expensive to maintain. To this shortcoming must be added the fact that in events that appeal to the eye the average person likes to be surrounded by his fellowmen. A goodly part of the pleasure of attending a football game lies in being part of the crowd. Theater television, therefore, will be very popular.

Dr. Alexanderson's demonstration may mark a milestone in the amusement world. It foreshadows the day when a chain of theaters, operating on fixed schedule, will offer their patrons pictures of sporting events, political rallies and the like, during their occurrence.

AIRSHIP POSSIBILITIES.

In considering the dirigible airship three questions may be asked: What is its application? What will it cost to construct, operate and maintain? Will it justify this cost? Carl B. Fritsche, vice president of the Detroit Aircraft Corporation, and one of the leading spirits in the pioneering development of the all-metal dirigible, in a paper presented recently at the fourth technical meeting of the aeronautic division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, gave answers to these questions. The dirigible's application, he said, will be as a military and naval arm and as an indispensable adjunct of the commercial transportation machine. Its cost on the basis of investment required plus man, hours and horsepower hours required for a given purpose will be less than that of the steamship or railway train. The dirigible, he asserted emphatically, will prove to be a paying proposition.

A commercially practicable dirigible has yet to be constructed. The Graf Zeppelin is far too small and too slow for profitable commercial operation, as are the new British-built R-100 and R-101. A bill now before Congress provides for the construction for the Army of a 100-ton all-metal ship having a maximum speed of 100 miles an hour. Even such a ship would be too small for commercial transatlantic service, but it would be of an ideal size and speed for the South American or Hawaiian trade. Mr. Fritsche used a hypothetical 300-ton, all metal ship having a maximum speed of 100 miles an hour upon which to base his comparisons. Such a ship would be commercially practicable.

He asserted that the 300-ton ship when used for scouting purposes by the Navy would have an effectiveness equivalent to that of three 10,000-ton cruisers. It would release three 10,000-ton cruisers for other duty. Its cost as compared to that of a cruiser would be as 1 is to 1.7. The value of fuel consumed by one dirigible as compared to that consumed by three cruisers performing the same errand would be one-eighth as great. The man power output per square mile surveyed by the cruiser would be 128 times as much as by the dirigible. The airship could cruise at a hypothetical speed of 30 knots without returning to her base for 22 days, as against but 5½ days for the cruiser. If the airship were destroyed the loss would be but 60 men as compared with 570 for the cruiser, and the monetary loss would be considerably less. Mr. Fritsche made similar comparisons, each of which favor the airship over the surface craft, with respect to various naval and military missions for which dirigibles might be used.

Commercially, Mr. Fritsche contended that the dirigible is definitely superior to the surface vessel in services for which it is definitely suited. The dirigible is capable of carrying 21 per cent of its gross lift in pay load, whereas the Leviathan carries in pay load only 4 per cent of its gross displacement. The Leviathan uses 2.94 times as much fuel per ton mile of pay cargo as would a 300-ton dirigible, and, despite the greater cost of dirigible fuel, the cost per ton mile by dirigible would be no greater. The energy to transport one ton of pay cargo from New York to London would be less for the dirigible than it is for the Leviathan, and the man hours required per ton mile of pay cargo would be 1.16 times greater for the Leviathan. "In view of this evidence," said Mr. Fritsche, "it is not too optimistic to predict that the large merchant airship of the future, irrespective of its saving in time, will be able to compete successfully with palatial ocean liners on a dollars and cents basis in the transport of first-class passengers, mail and express."

EXPENSE OF NAVIES

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A great deal is said about the expense of our Navy and the saving that would be effected by the pending treaty. In fact, nothing will be saved by the treaty, as construction expenses are governed by acts of Congress, and, judging from past experience, no more will be appropriated for new construction if the treaty is rejected than if it is ratified.

In fact, more appropriations will be required to build up to our full ratio under the treaty. The principal difference is that without the treaty we would have the type of ships our needs require.

But aside from all this, the burden of taxation of the average American citizen is in his local State, city, county, road district, and school district taxes. Not a cent of this can be expended on the Navy. The average citizen pays no direct taxes to the Federal Government.

Even as to the Federal Government there is much misapprehension as to the effect of the expenditure of money on the Navy. It is generally discussed as though the money spent on the Navy were a total loss. But is that so?

Our Navy, also our small Army, cost more relatively to their size than those of other countries, because the pay of the men of our Army and Navy is higher than that of any other country—very much higher than in some countries.

It is also true that the cost of civilian labor and of supplies of food and equipment required by our Navy are higher than in other countries on account of the higher standard of living, higher wages and higher prices in this country.

But from a national and governmental standpoint the money paid for these wages and supplies is not lost. Money paid to laborers in our shipyards, whether Government yards or private yards, goes at once into trade circulation. It is paid out for living, for the support of families, for household goods and commodities, for personal expenses, and goes to pay the wages of other laborers in factories producing these supplies. It still constitutes a part of the national wealth. It remains subject to local and national taxation and its circulation adds to the business activity and prosperity of the Nation. The same thing is true as to money paid by the Government for rations, building material, iron and steel, and all of the varied materials used by the Navy. The greater part of this money goes to pay the wages of men in private factories and mines or on the farms where these supplies are produced, and, instead of being lost, it remains a part of our national wealth.

There is some loss, of course, in the wastage of materials, but it is a very small part of the amount which is ordinarily figured in these calculations.

But suppose our Navy has cost all that the pacifists claim?

The tremendous alleged cost of "past wars" is constantly being counted up and proclaimed. Most of this cost was due to our unpreparedness and our failure to follow Washington's advice.

But suppose that these past wars did cost all that the exaggerated statements of the pacifists claim! Were they worth the cost? Was the Revolution worth what it cost? Or the Civil War what it cost?

That depends on the point of view. To many internationalists they were not worth the cost, because these Mrs. Jellybys are opposed to nationalism anyhow. They would prefer today to be a part of a world government, rather than mere citizens of the United States.

Others of us think that the War of Independence, which made us a nation, and the war for the preservation of the Union, which kept us a great nation, were worth the price.

COMMON PLACE.

This much we know, they are admired
Who keep the faith though worn and tired.
They best beloved are, who seek
The warm affection of the meek
And undisturbed by pomp or place
Do common little tasks with grace.

The mother at her sewing sings
And reaps the love such labor brings.
The father, for his son's sake, stands
Before a lather with grimy hands,
And at his dreary post can see
The man that is some day to be.

Power hammers at the soul, and pride
Would push all gentleness aside.
Strength tempts us all, though right or wrong,
To prove by triumph we are strong.
But brave is he who stays behind
And chooses rather to be kind.

This much we know, in tender thought
Perfection of the soul is wrought,
They best beloved are, who stay
At humble posts from day to day,
And bear with fortitude and grace
The burdens of the common place.

When Men Lose Interest in Thoroughbred Horses the Land Is Soon Filled With Scrubs.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

If young men who play baseball and football were restrained by no other influence than fear of fines or dismissal, few games would end without a fight.

If the youngsters in a school room were restrained only by their fear of punishment, no teacher could keep them quiet without a club.

If the citizen of this country, old and young, felt no other restraining influence than fear of the law, not one in ten would refrain from crime.

The law alone can not keep people decent.

Most of them are respectable because of good sportsmanship—because they recognize the necessity of respecting the accepted rules—because they have a conscience—because they have pride in decency—call it what you will, it is an influence within themselves that makes their obedience to law voluntary.

This voluntary respectability of the average civilized man is the foundation on which law's machinery is built.

If only force could keep men decent, there would be need of regiments of police, multiplied thousands of courts and prisons without number.

Much is being written and spoken to the effect that people no longer respect law, which is to say that people no longer fear the punishments that law provides.

That is true; but that is not a sufficient explanation of crowded courts and crowded prisons.

If nobody feared the law, and yet everybody loved decency for its own sake, the jails would be empty.

As the fear of law is not a sufficient influence to keep people decent, neither is the absence of that fear a sufficient explanation of the law's failure.

Crime multiplies, not because people no longer respect law but because they no longer respect respectability.

The law no longer has the essential cooperation of voluntary decency.

The resulting chaos is attributed to prohibition or to the violation of prohibition, but that is to blame the symptom for the disease.

If saloons were opened on every corner tomorrow, the same indifference to decency would remain.

If liquor should disappear tomorrow, those who now scorn respectability would scorn it still.

You can't make liquor or prohibition a scapegoat for the present lack of pride in virtue.

The cause of our corruption is something far more vital and fundamental.

We are no longer ashamed of things that are shameful.

In the pride of prosperity we have forgotten the God of our fathers.

As a people we lack the fine high pride in moral uprightness that protects the high-born despite success, and we seldom return to our father's house until we eat husks with the swine.

STAGGERING VACATION STATISTICS.

Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and the big broadcasting man of the Hoover administration, tells radio audiences that vacationing has taken rank with America's great industries. When you go on a vacation you are helping boost business, says the doctor.

* * * *

More than $3,000,000,000 a year is put into circulation through people who will eat anything and sleep anywhere as long as it comes under the head of an outing.

* * * *

Something like $500,000,000 is spent every year for hot dogs, soda pop, peanuts, pies, milkshakes, ham sandwiches, bum coffee, ice cream and other ostrich fodder, statistics compiled at Washington show.

* * * *

The business done last year in cold drinks and roadside lunches (exclusive of toy balloons and lollipops) exceeded our combined national exports to Japan, Brazil and the Netherlands. Point that out when you stop at Ye Wayside Luncherie and your youngest son asks for his third frankfurter and another glass of soda.

* * * *

And when Sister Susie gets peeved at popper because he won't make his fifth stop in 45 minutes for an ice-cream cone just stop the car and bellow in her ear that if all the money spent for ice-cream cones in July and August could be put in one pile it would lift the German debt or something.

* * * *

But don't let Dr. Klein hear you. The doctor is for bigger vacation bills. He thinks one of the best ways to help restore prosperity is to take your summer vacation early and often.

* * * *

The more people there are on vacations the more money will be put in circulation. The truth of this becomes more striking when you realize that none of the statistics compiled by Dr. Klein give any idea of the vast sums spent each summer for ivy-poisoning antidote, sunburn lotions, gasoline, tire repairs, traffic court fines, water wings, ukuleles, camera supplies, white pants, golf balls and instructions in how to do the jackknife dive.

* * * *

The doctor fails to make the figures more staggering by estimating what part of the national debt could be paid by the money spent in July alone to take raspberry stains off Miss America's frocks and clean her white shoes.

* * * *

No guess is made as to whether our exports to China, Chile and Cos Cob are exceeded in cash value by the money paid to doctors in August to treat vacationists for overestimating their capacity for corn on the cob.

* * * *

However, the point to bear in mind is that no matter whether your vacation breaks you or not you are helping get America back to normal. So do your bit. And don't spare the hot dogs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Premature Independence for the Philippines Would Be Destructive of the Object Sought by Both Countries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Former Governor General Stimson, fresh from a cooperative exploration as Secretary of State at the London naval conference of the international layout in the Pacific, has spoken the last word on the geography of the independence question; namely, that there is danger galore for a weak and unaided Philippine independent nation that would be too overwhelming even for so patriotic a people as the Filipinos.

He who would understand the arithmetic of the question will readily perceive that independence in five to fifteen years can not be an enduring or an endurable independence, but inevitable reversion of American control on the one hand and strangulation of the supreme ideal of the Filipinos on the other; a sequel that those who intoxicate themselves and mesmerize the unwary with the rhetoric of the question do not or simply refuse to comprehend.

The predeclaration of Philippine independence as of 25 or 30 years from now will be the zero hour for the operation of the forces of adjustment and construction that are expected to bring about the grand event, ap with a detention here and a detour there the Filipinos can arrive at last in good order and peace at the summit of their political aspirations.

During the preparatory interval the expansion of those industries dependent on the American tariff protection will stop, while the development of duty-free products, like rubber, coffee and quinine, will receive great impetus. The establishment of non-protected industries will accelerate rather than retard the concession of political independence to the Philippines.

The Filipinos look to America for decisive action upon their future political status. To that righteous America that they have known during the last 31 years they may well say, in the language of Epictetus: "Show us what is for our good, and we shall follow it; show us what is for our ill, and we shall turn away from it; make us emulators of thyself, as Socrates made his disciples."

The Problem of Divorce—Suggestions for Liberalizing Law for Wives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Divorce is woman's problem. No normal man would hold any woman in the relations of matrimony against her will. The wife should, therefore, have a divorce at will, without cause, without scandal and without alimony. Upon the other hand, no husband should have the right to divorce his wife at law unless the wife of her own free will shall have first divorced herself in fact by her desertion or infidelity. If Jane goes home to mother or goes off to another man, then let John have a court of law find the fact and grant him a divorce accordingly. But as to the woman, let her have a divorce at law for the asking, without any assignment of cause except such as shall be sufficient to herself and as shall be implied without statement in her application.

I say nothing about the desirability of divorce. That is a question for each woman to settle for herself in the circumstances of her own life. If she be dependent or have children to keep, let her have separation and maintenance under the existing law. I would not repeal the present laws, but would give wives this new free outlet to divorce in cases where the wife wants it. The woman who for any reason wants to leave her husband would then have an open and honorable way to do it.

Property rights ought not to be affected or qualified by the marital status. I am sure that more women would have husbands and homes if this were the law. This does not mean that the laws of inheritance should be changed. Private property arrangements and settlements upon either marriage or divorce are in no wise precluded.

A husband ought to take and keep the vows prescribed by the church, but the wife ought to depend upon the husband's honor and not have recourse to the courts, except for simple divorce. There is no duty which a wife owes a husband in default of which she may be punished as for a contempt of court. Equality of right requires that the converse likewise becomes the law.

Memorials to Jefferson and Hamilton Should Supplement Washington Monument.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to indorse the suggestion of "Federalist" that the selection of historic names to be monumentally honored in Washington should hereafter be made by a well qualified commission. As "Federalist" suggests, the most appropriate plan would be to have Federal city memorials of American worthies illustrate the early growth of our Republic, and reading his list of heroic names, the idea arose in my mind that the shaft in memory of Washington should be supplemented by monuments to Hamilton and Jefferson. Why our foremost political builders, the trusted administrative counselors of Washington, have been neglected is hard to understand.

By the patriotic association of these three the fiber of the as yet untried Constitution was matured—Jefferson, alert to safeguard the divine right of individual liberty and local self-government, Hamilton, firm to preserve the divine principle of social order, with the steady hand of Washington to hold the balance safe from the menace of partisan strife.

Surely no more inspiring memorial group can be imagined than that of Washington, Hamilton, and Jefferson, to illustrate the story of Constitutional development.

U. S. Justices Making Ready For Vacations

Hughes and Stones Plan Trips to Europe; City Awaits Roberts.

By JEAN ELIOT.

VACATION days for the executive and legislative groups may depend upon such vexatious matters as the tariff and Senate action on the naval arms treaty. But the judiciary is not hampered by politics in making its holiday plans. Consequently the adjournment of the Supreme Court in early June will be followed by an exodus of the members of the Supreme Bench and it is not likely that newest member of the court, Justice Owen J. Roberts, and Mrs. Roberts, will "dig in" in Washington until autumn.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes are to spend the summer abroad, sailing in June, and Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, whose favorite playground is a little island off the coast of Maine, are also planning to pass this summer in Europe. Justice and Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis always go to their summer home in Massachusetts. It has been the custom of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes to spend the summer months in the quaint cottage which was once the home of his father, the poet Oliver Wendell Holmes. This is at "Beverly-by-the Depot"—in Justice Holmes' own parlance, to distinguish the little Massachusetts town from the more fashionable Beverly Farms and Beverly-by-the-Sea. The other members of the Supreme Court group are less regular in the choice of their summertime activities and their plans have not yet been announced.

Justice and Mrs. Roberts are of a type to be most congenial with the other members of the Supreme Court circle. Old-timers, who used to set their clocks by the appearance of the late Chief Justice Edward Douglas White on his morning walk to the Capitol, may perhaps count upon Justice Roberts for similar assistance, for he is devoted to walking, and punctuality is one of his most conspicuous virtues.

Although Justice and Mrs. Roberts will undoubtedly move their lares and penates from Philadelphia to Washington, their friends are confident that they will never relinquish their 800-acre farm in Chester County, where they spend a great deal of time and which is the home of their affection. There Justice Roberts devotes himself to the cultivation of flowers and vegetables, while Mrs. Roberts' deepest interest is centered in the stock and poultry.

As attorney for the Government in the long-drawn-out oil cases, Justice Roberts has been much in Washington in the last few years, and both he and Mrs. Roberts already have many friends here. Mrs. Roberts was Miss Elizabeth Caldwell Rogers, of Fairfield, Conn. Her widowed mother is a member of the Roberts household and Justice and Mrs. Roberts have one daughter, Miss Elizabeth Rogers Roberts.

Miss Roberts, who is artistic in taste and talent, is a member of the Philadelphia Art Alliance. She is to spend the summer abroad, with a group of friends whose tastes are similar. They will pass some time on the Spanish coast and will go later to Brittany, where artists congregate.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Lowe will give up their house at 1713 R street in mid-June and will go to New York, where they expect to make their home for the next two years. They have taken an apartment in Park avenue. Until her marriage last summer Mrs. Lowe was Miss Elizabeth Ives.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, Ambassador of Great Britan, has returned from Philadelphia, where he was the guest of the Philadelphia Country Club on the second day of the Davis Cup matches between the United States and Canada.

Miss Katherine Tydings, sister of Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, is the guest of Miss Frances Ruth Gillette at 1717 Corcoran street.

Dunn Family To Sail Soon For England

Capital Man Will Take Post at Embassy as First Secretary.

Mr. James Clement Dunn, now serving in the State Department, has just been designated to the post of First Secretary of the Embassy at London, and, with Mrs. Dunn and their daughter, Marianna A. Dunn, will leave for England within a short time. Mr. Dunn was in Haiti last winter as secretary of the investigating commission sent there by the President. Until recently he was ceremonial officer at the White House and chief of the protocol division in the State Department.

Mr. Dunn's berth at London is but one in a series of diplomatic posts held since entering the service in 1919. He has been attached to the embassies in Berne, Madrid, Port-au-Prince and Brussels. Through his service as ceremonial officer for the State Department and the White House, where he handled questions of precedence, Mr. Dunn experienced splendid training for his protocol post, and since 1928 has been head of that division, which was founded by former Secretary Kellogg.

Mr. Dunn is a native of Newark, N. J., and studied law and architecture before entering the Navy for service in the World War. After the armistice he entered the foreign service. He is a member of the New York Yacht Club, the Metropolitan Club, of Washington, and the Richmond Country Club.

Capital Girl Wed Abroad To Paris Man

Bourron-Marlotte, France, May 25 (A.P.).—Miss Barbara Lathrop Fairchild, daughter of Dr. David Fairchild, of the United States Department of Agriculture, was married here yesterday to Leonard R. Muller, of Geneva, Switzerland, and Paris.

The ceremony took place in the courtyard of the country home of Theodore Spicer-Simson, sculptor. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society of Washington, and Mrs. Grosvenor, uncle and aunt of the bride, came from the United States especially to attend the wedding.

Miss Gloria Grosvenor was a bridesmaid. The bride is a granddaughter of the late inventor, Alexander Graham Bell.

The bride is well known in Washington society as a former resident of this city and as an occasional visitor before attending the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts in Paris, from which she has just been graduated.

The announcement of her engagement was made in Washington in early November when her parents were visiting Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor, before Dr. Fairchild, accompanied by Mrs. Fairchild, went to Europe in continuation of his duties as a principal agriculturer of the Department of Agriculture. Dr. and Mrs. Fairchild formerly maintained a home here known as In the Woods.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the Beaux Arts of Geneva. He is a descendant of one of the old Swiss families of Berne. His mother, Mme. Muller-Briquet, is a sister of Dr. John Briquet, chevalier of the Legion of Honor, one of the leading systematic botanists of Europe.

Capt. Frank B. Freyer left Washington yesterday by airplane for Newport to rejoin his ship, the U. S. S. Trenton. He came to town on Saturday, also by air, to be with Mrs. Freyer for a brief visit to attend the Davis Cup matches and the air races, but missed both when they were postponed because of inclement weather.

The breakfast opened with the pledge of allegiance to the American Flag, conducted by Mrs. Percy E. Quin, president general of the Children of the American Revolution, introduced by the club's president and toastmistress, Mrs. Bruce Baird.

The speaker was Seth W. Richardson, Assistant Attorney General, whose subject was the "Duties of Citizenship."

An interesting feature was the club's song, words of which were written by Mrs. Bruce Baird, sung to the tune of "America, the Beautiful," and led by Mrs. Gladys Manchester Wallin, of California, accompanied by Elizabeth Gardener Coombs. Voice numbers were given by Mrs. Carolyn Bost, accompanied by Mr. Walton Boyce.

Others at the speaker's table were Mrs. Bruce Baird, Mr. Seth W. Richardson, Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty, Mrs. Carolyn Norton Bost, Mr. Walton Boyce and Mrs. Gertrude Bischoff.

Invitations have been sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Josejh Ignatius Crowley for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Josephine Anne Crowley, and Mr. Henry Loyola Burns on Wednesday morning at 9:30 in Our Lady's Chapel at Gonzaga College, in Washington. A reception at 3106 Thirty-third place will follow the ceremony.

NEVADA CAVE YIELDS PREHISTORIC BONES

900 OBJECTS ARE FOUND

Los Angeles, May 25 (A.P.).—Dr. James A. B. Scherer, director of the Southwest Museum, has announced the finding in Gypsum Cave, Nevada, of a wealth of additional evidence that prehistoric man roamed the American continent probably at least 20,000 years ago.

Last week announcement was made that excavation of the cave had revealed campfire ashes, charcoal and burnt wood.

Nine hundred artifacts, or prehistoric objects made by man, Dr. Scherer reported, has been recovered so far, mostly from beneath a layer of gypsum rock which took ages of time to form from overhead drippings.

Animal Bones Found.

These include scores of broken atlatls, long two-piece dart which antedates the bow and arrow; many flint points similar to an arrowhead, for the atlatls; feathers bound with sinew, supposedly used as prayer sticks; a magnificent white stone knife 4 inches long, with a wooden handle, affixed by splitting and then binding with pitch; a necklace of a type never before found in American archeological history, made of joints of a centipede strung on fiber of a desert place; piers of burnt wood 3 or 4 feet away from the fire ashes, and many translucent gypsum pendants, cut in odd shapes and drilled with a hole for suspension.

These conclusive proofs of prehistoric man's hand, the museum director pointed out, were scattered with and among the remains of the extinct ground sloths, huge prehistoric mammals, and of extinct primitive horses and of a small slender limbed prehistoric camel. The bones of the two latter animals, it was explained, probably were left by carniverous animals which dragged them to this safe lair for devouring. Many bones of these savage animals also were found.

Bones Buried Seven Feet.

"In every one of the five rooms of Gypsum Cave," said Dr. Scherer, "our excavations have brought to light objects of human manufacture lying in such relation to remains of prehistoric animals as to require exceedingly ingenious argument to explain the circumstances on any ground except that of contemporaneity."

Dr. Scherer announced the new finds after returning last night from a visit to Gypsum Cace, 21 miles due east of Las Vegas, Nev. Dr. Marx Harrington, archeologist, and discoverer of the cave, is there directing the excavation work. Dr. Harrington formerly was connected with the Heye Indian Foundation of New York.

The museum director, explaining the proof of antiquity, pointed out that the bones, campfire ashes and many other prehistoric remains were buried beneath seven distinct strata, totaling seven feet in depth.

NEW DATA ON MAN'S ORIGIN IS SOUGHT

the immediate objective of Mr. Andrews. The area on which he will concentrate is a great strip of the earth's Pliocene stratum, preceding the Ice Age, which scientists believe was the period of the "Peking woman" whose skull was discovered near Peiping last December and attracted wide attention in the scientific world.

In many places, according to information Dr. Andrews has assembled from Mongol scouts, this stratum, extending over hundreds of square miles, is exposed now at the earth's surface. This makes a search for fossils possible at certain times of the year.

"This stratum is exactly what the American Museum of Natural History has been seeking for the last nine years," Dr. Andrews explained before announcing his start for the desert. "It is just the right age where we expect to find evidence of the origin of man, and I feel certain we will make important discoveries.

"The plateu where we will spend the summer was once beautifully forested, and there were marvelous lakes. The climate was exhilarating which proved the stimulus for the dawn of man to develop and go forward. Scientists have proved that this section of the world is the oldest continuously dry land on the face of the earth, because it remained above the waters while the land masses of Europe and America were periodically rising and falling."

The expedition, promoted by the American Museum of Natural History, also will make further explorations in the area, where in 1928, were found remains of the "Dune Dwellers," a race of people who lived in the Stone Age.

Princess Ekes Out Living As Instructor in Brussels

Tragic Fate of Former Heiress to Crown of Saxony, Now Ill at Age of 60, Revealed Through Request for Leave of Absence.

Brussels, May 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The tragic fate of a woman who from being heiress to a European throne and one of the most celebrated and most talked of beauties of her time is now, at the age of 60, living alone and forgotten in a small suburban villa eking out a meager existence by giving lessons to children, was revealed by her application for a short leave of absence on account of illness.

She is Louise Antoinette of Tuscany former Crown Princess of Saxony. The former crown princess, school teacher, wears none of her high sounding titles now. To the parents of the children who attend her little class in a Brussels suburb she is known as the Comtesse D'Ysette.

Those who claim to have kept in touch with the former princess relate that the comtesse, who is still remarkably beautiful despite her age, is working on a volume of memoirs.

The rancor with which her influential German enemies persecuted her led, it is said, to the princess, while living in Brussels during the war, being subjected to greater indignity and having more difficulties placed in her way than the ordinary citizen of Brussels.

She was not allowed to pass outside the narrow confines of her suburb, a privilege which was granted without any difficulty whatsoever to almost any Belgian who cared to apply for it. The authorities, knowing the remarkably liberal views of the princess, were afraid of indiscretions and revelations which she might make.

Princess Louise was the daughter of Ferdinand IV, Grand Duke of Tuscany, and she married the Crown Prince of Saxony in 1891.

About ten years later she eloped with a man named Giron, who was her children's tutor, and after her husband had divorced her she married Signor Toselli, a musician, from whom she later separated.

WAR MOTHERS SAY GOOD-BY TO GRAVES

Pilgrimage of First Group Almost Over as More Arrive in England.

BRITISH DEAD HONORED

Paris, May 25 (A.P.).—The American Gold Star Mothers of the first group to cross the Atlantic on a pilgrimage to the graves of the American war dead, today said good-by to their boys in the battleground cemeteries.

Their pilgrimage is almost over. They have left behind Verdun, Nancy, Chateau Thierry, Soissons and St. Quentin, cities they knew from war time dispatches, and are coming back to Paris along the roads made famous by their soldier sons.

Many of the mothers reached Paris tonight and tomorrow all will be here. Their last day in the battle zone was marked by two important events, the French national celebration of Mother's Day and the formal opening of the American Legion Auxiliary's annual poppy drive by Ambassador Walter E. Edge.

One Mother Goes to Hospital.

An illness was reported tonight among the mothers in Paris. Mrs. Samuel M. Reynolds, of Damascus, Ohio, was taken to the American Hospital for rest and care. She is 78 years old and worn out by the fatigue and emotion of the trip.

London, May 25 (A.P.).—Gold Star Mothers from the United States and veterans of the A. E. F. who accompanied them today took possession of Westminster, where they were received on behalf of the government by the Earl and Countess de la Ware. The earl is parliamentary undersecretary of state for war.

The Americans, comprising 156 mothers and 116 veterans of the Twenty-seventh Division who are acting as their traveling companions, arrived in England yesterday.

Speeches of Welcome Made.

In a vaulted chamber where much of England's history has been enacted, the women were served a light luncheon. Then officials, including Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, mounted the stone steps and made speeches of welcome. Earl Jellicoe and Lady Edward Spencer Churchill brought the visitors greetings from the British Legion.

Then, led by Ambassador Dawes and Col. John Thomas, military attache at the American Embassy, the solemn little group marched across the street to Westminster Abbey, where they silently gathered about the tomb of England's Unknown Soldier. Mrs. Flora McCoy, of Tonawanda, N. Y., who lost two sons in the war, laid a wreath on the simple slab.

After the abbey ceremony the procession marched down Whitehall to the cenotaph, which is Great Britain's official memorial to her World War dead. Traffic stopped, and bystanders lined up on either side of the street while the women paid silent tribute to ther ally's dead.

Carr, also were wounded, as was Mrs Curtis' husband.

Benny McArthur, 17, and Cletus Loftus, about 24, were wounded as they scattered with others of the panic-stricken crowd before Police Chief Adams shot down Keller and stopped the fight. The name of the eighth victim was not known here.

Marshal Shinaberry said Mobs married about two weeks ago. Keller also is married and is a father.

A Federal indictment charging Keller with dope peddling is on file in the Jonesboro Federal Court, City Attorney Mosby said.

Rites for Primate To Be Impressive

Archbishop of Canterbury From 1903 to 1928 Will Lie in Cathedral.

London, May 25 (A.P.).—Lord Randall Thomas Davidson, former Archbishop of Canterbury, who died peacefully in his sleep early today, will be buried with impressive ceremonies in Canterbury Cathedral on Friday.

The services will be conducted by Lord Davidson's successor in the See of Canterbury, Archbishop Cosmo Gordon Lang, Primate of England. King George will be represented.

Lord Davidson, who was Primate of England from 1903 to 1928, had been ill for some time in his Chelsea home and began to sink yesterday. His vitality steadily ebbed until he died at 1:05 o'clock this morning. Death was solely due to old age. Throughout the night Lady Davidson, despite her frail health, kept vigil at his bedside.

Lord and Lady Davidson had no children. Thus there is no heir to the barony, and the first temporal peerage bestowed upon an English churchman becomes extinct.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

SELDOM it is that the leading lady of a stock company becomes the misleading lady. Yet that very thing happens tonight in the National Theater when Miss Marion Wells assumes the title role of the play being revived by the National Theater Players—"The Misleading Lady." In this play the leading lady really gets the worst of it; something that seldom happens in dramaturgy. As a rule the cards are usually stacked for heroines in the drama. This time the leading man steals all the thunder.

* * * *

JUST such weather as Washington experiences at the present is what makes for good theater business. On Saturday night last, when the mercury took a nose dive, the rush for shelter, away from the icy blasts coming down Pennsylvania avenue, led to a packed house at the National; this and the increasing popularity of the players. They do say, and with some reason, that every performance plays to bigger—and better—houses; all of which, naturally, does not make the management mad.

* * * *

STOCK companies throughout the country are beginning to show better balance sheets—a fact that seems to encourage theater managers and producers. They argue: If stock is popular, the legitimate theater will do better business when the 1930-31 season rolls around. Already, some of the New York theatrical producers are working on a business arrangement whereby new plays destined for Broadway will have first showing in stock cities—with visiting stars. In Philadelphia and Boston the experiment has proved successful.

* * * *

ONE of the big producing houses that sees an advantage in this system is the Erlanger outfit. 'Tis said by those who know that several choice plays now ready for rehearsal will be tried out in stock before being sent into New York. At the moment, the Erlanger interests are shaping up for the greatest year of all. With theaters in most of the great cities—they own half interest in the National here—their greatest battle will be with the rival Shuberts, soon to be divested of Poli's, and having a claim on the Belasco. So if the battle gets into Washington it may be that the Belasco will be open for business at the beginning of the season. This is the sign, anyway.

GAYETY

Bobby Nissen, pride of Cheverly, who began her stage career here, bids well to give plenty of opposition to the blondes who seek to fill Hinda Wassau's place. Bobby came to the front again yesterday to gain high honors.

Mae Brown, another blonde, who struts a shapely figure, showed burlesque fans here how she and Jean Steele made the Columbia, on Broadway a popular house. Mae went over big in both her specialties yesterday.

Joe Moss, comic, who spent his younger days around the Peabody School in this city, coupled with Fryer and Costello to gather the laughs. Booth Rush and Sammy Rice were both popular figures yesterday. Lew Petel, the neatly attired straight man, and feeder-in-chief to the comics, dominated the performance.

The charming chorus of 20 girls, with exceptional youth, beauty, talent and plenty of pep, was an outstanding feature of the performance.

Next week should be the prize week for Jimmy Lake, for he will have on hand to offer to his fans burlesque's most beautiful girl, Ann Corio, the shapely "dancing doll," who has been playing to packed houses in Boston.

Auction, wrestling and amateur nights are again in line this week.

bly meeting, procession, or other demonstrations in Madras City in connection with the civil disobedience campaign. The boycott of foreign cloth was also forbidden.

At Multan, the police charged a procession which was being held contrary to the ruling, and in the ensuing fight a policie officer and five paraders were injured. One of the injured volunteers was reported dying tonight.

Karachi, India, May 25 (A.P.).—Word was received here today that Sir Shah Nawaz Khan Bhutto, a member of the Bombay Legislative Council, while presiding over a Mohammedan meeting at Sukkur, in Bombay province Thursday night, had called upon his followers to ignore the civil disobedience campaign as a Hindu movement. He said it tended toward anarchy and revolution.

Urges Congress to Act.

Charging that the civil disobedience campaign is the climax of efforts of the advanced Hindus to get possession of the government for themselves, he said it was time for the Indian Congress to save its own reputation by calling a halt to the movement.

The meeting adopted a resolution deploring the extremists' attitude in rejecting the British offer of a round table conference to discuss India's status. The resolution urged all Indians, particularly Musselmans, to keep aloof from the civil disobedience campaign.

A second resolution appealed to sister communities to discontinue the present political tactics in support of Mahatma Gandhi's volunteers. A third appealed to Viceroy Lord Irwin to give the Mohammedans of Sind, who form two-thirds of the entire Moslem population of Bombay presidency, an adequate representation at the proposed London round table conference.

Gandhi Cause Friends Plan New York Parade

New York, May 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.). Lower Broadway, which never fails to do its part in making parades through that part of town a rousing success, may have an opportunity to wave its flags and twine its tickertape serpentines and throw its impromptu confetti Tuesday morning when Raymond Duncan, brother of the late Isadora Duncan, dancer and high priest of the Grecian dress reform movement, hopes to be able to lead a procession of several hundred followers and Indian sympathizers to the Battery to make salt as a gesture of sympathy with Mahatma Gandhi, leader of the Indian Nationalist civil disobedience campaign.

The procession will be headed by Mr. Duncan, with his long hair and flowing Grecian robes and sandals.

The salt made from the waters of New York Harbor will be sent to Gandhi as a token of sympathy with the campaign. Mr. Duncan plans to sail Thursday for his home in Paris, and will take the salt that far with him.

Classis Acts to Grant Privileges for Women

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., May 25.—The Virginia Classis of the Reformed Church has voted favorably on the proposed constitutional amendment granting equal rights to women in the judicatories and admitting women to orders of the church, it was announced today by the Rev. S. L. Flickinger, chairman of the committee submitting the proposed changes for adoption or rejection.

He also announced that the classis had voiced approval of the principle of union with the Northwestern Evangelical Synod, but advised further consideration of union with the United Brethren Church in order to find the assurance of unity of spirit before an organic union is consummated.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

JAZZ, Walter Damrosch said at the conclusion of his radio program Saturday night, appeals more to our nerves.

"I do not think it can appeal to the heart or head," Mr. Damrosch continued, "and as the kind of music which I love is more that kind naturally I can not take the same interest in jazz.

"Althought, to be honest as a musician, I must say that the introduction and development of jazz has enriched the music in one particular, and that is in the greater diversity of rhythm.

"But rhythm alone can not make music. It may excite us, it may make our nerves tingle, but it can not appeal to our finer emotions, and I naturally claim that is the first object of music."

Mr. Damrosch will conclude his series for this season next Saturday night with an all-Wagnerian program.

West Point, as well as the Naval Academy, graduation exercises will be broadcast by Columbia.

FRANCIS WILSON will make one of his rare appearances before the microphone tonight (WOR, Newark, 9 p. m.) at the Players Club in New York along with Walter Hampden, Daniel Frohman and others.

Edward Thorgersen, the announcer, is said to be a direct descendant of the great Viking, Lief the Lucky.

They tell the story that Bob MacGimsey, whose whistling is a feature on radio programs, had to stand on the corner in New York in the rain for ten minutes because he couldn't make a tax driver hear his whistle.

NOTICING the account in "Dial Flashes" of how radio announcers at Station WAIU, Columbus, explain to listeners when an emergency forces the station to make a change in its schedule as announced in the newspapers, Milton Baker, manager of WMAL, in a spirit of cooperation, called up to say that hereafter his station would adopt this policy.

"Just that thing happened the night Lindbergh was scheduled to speak and in the last minute didn't," Mr. Baker said. "The newspapers, based upon information sent them, had announced in good faith that Lindy would be heard.

"Realizing this, I was very glad to tell our listeners that the newspapers were not to blame for the error."

A new program titled "California Melodies," originating in the studios of KHJ, Los Angeles, will be heard here on Wednesday evening (WMAL, 10:30 p. m.), presented by motion picture stars in pictures now in preparation.

Because Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor" has been played to death, a special arrangement of it has been made to be broadcast tomorrow night (WRC, 8 p. m.) under the title "What's the Matter With Rachmaninoff?"

Why blame Rachmaninoff?

WHEN inquiry was made of C. H. Van Housen, Philadelphia radioscribe, as to the reason the Quaker City teams have so stubbornly resitsed putting their games on the air, he replied:

"There is just one reason why local games are not broadcast and that is, the management of the local parks believe broadcasting the games would cut patronage and lower receipts. That's the whole thing in a sentence."

Roxy and His Gang have been returned to WRC's schedule for the duration of the daylight saving period.

The arrival of the British dirigible R-100 at St. Hyacinth, Quebec, will be broadcast throughout the United States. Weather permitting, the R-100 should arrive in Canada Friday or Saturday.

IF they are putting up a good fight on schedule time Powel Crosley through WLW, Cincinnati, Wednesday evening, June 11 will undertake to describe the landing of a fighting tarpon in the tournament at Sarasota.

It is the hope of deep sea fishermen that they may have at least one listener in the White House.

Among the stations carrying the baseball party with Babe Ruth, Walter Johnson and others tonight at 7:30 o'clock will be WJZ, KDKA, WJR, WMC and very oppropriately WHAM.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

White georgette trims the dress of black crepe . . . and appropriately, ermine trims the coat of black cloth. (Courtesy of Yteb, Paris.)

Paris, May 25.

O-o-o-o-o-oh! Have I gossiped to you for a long time about all the things that are happening in this heah fashion-studio? Well, among other things, we found a shop where we could not only buy those adorable stubby toed and very high-heeled shoes that always used to be thought of as "French"—but never could be found anywhere in France when any one went to look for them—but that would obligingly make shoes to order in any color, leather or combination, all for the huge price of $4 more than any original model on display in the shop.

And then they had a beautiful pair in dark green kid and suede combination that was on sale. I got them to wear with a gray ensemble, and then I had to go to Alexandrine, who makes the most famous gloves in the world, where I had green suede gloves made to match the shoes. They cost three times as much as the shoes, but who cares about that when they see me all in gray with just dark green shoes and gloves!

• • • •

Who can't use a black ensemble! Especially if the dress would be as quietly smart and practical as the one I illustrated for you today designed by Yteb, with its love'y white georgette touches of trimming at the neck and wrists.

And what would you wear with this by way of a coat other than one of black cloth discreetly touched at the edge of either cuff with a piece of ermine?

There's only one thing in the whole world nicer than a nice hot bath and that's to step out of it into the warm folds of a bath towel-bathrobe and snuggle into it to dry yourself. You can thank Paris for the idea, and you'll thank me for the illustrated leaflet that you get when you send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post. Because that means that you can really make one for yourself, and for the little bear and the big bear.

• • • •

Our Mode Primer.

By "motoring" one means not merely riding in an automobile from one place to another, but fairly long trips for which one should dress, changing immediately at the end of the journey.

For motoring there are special coats of the sports variety, of course, but very loose and comfortable, the while quite enveloping and dust proof.

There are special things about motoring coats, too, you know. One is a coat with two little closed pockets on either sleeve in which to carry powder, cigarettes, or any of the beauty aids that a lovely lady knows she should bring. Another is a veil-like scarf of wool tulle to throw over the face when driving, back around the neck under the coat when not.

Small, close fitting, net or fabric hats, large, comfortable, sports gloves of the pull-on variety or shantung for very warm weather, shoes with Cuban heels or lower.

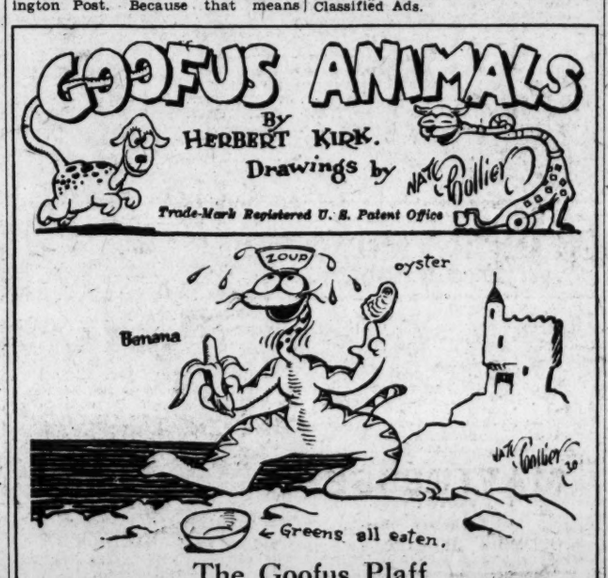
Miladi chic and practical for her motor trips!

• • • •

Of course, you're looking for the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post every week.

Au revoir!

You haven't finished reading this morning's news until you read Post Classified Ads.



The Goofus Plaff

You'll notice how sweetly, not to say neatly,
The Goofus Plaff eats all her greens;
Most correct, too, her manners when peeling bananas
And when opening oysters it seems.
But she falls down quite badly, not to say sadly,
When it comes time to gargle her soup,
For when balancing the plate on the top of her pate

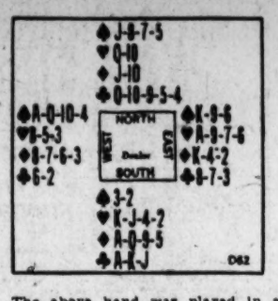
WORK ON BRIDGE



The above hand was played in a game of Auction Bridge. South bid one No Trump which obtained the contract.

At Contract Bridge South would bid one No Trump; or if afraid to do so with a worthless doubleton in Spades, one Diamond. Neither bid would produce a game contract, because North is short of the strength needed to jump either one.

The hand was played at Auction at three tables. At one West opened with his fourth best Diamond, not wishing to lead away from his double tenace in Spades. This killed East's King of Diamonds and South was at once in position to cash four Diamond tricks and five clubs, thereby going game.

At one of the other tables West led his fourth best Spade. East won with the King and returned the Spade. The adversaries won three Spades and the Ace of Hearts, but the Declarer went game.

At both of these tables the hand was misplayed; at the third it was played correctly. See if you can recognize the correct play before you read the comment that follows:

THE CORRECT PLAY.

At the third table West led his fourth best Spade. Against a No Trump the strongest suit should be opened, especially when it is a major; and the fact that it is headed by a double tenace is not an argument against starting with it.

With dummy playing the Seven of Spades, East should have played the Nine, not the King. (If dummy had played the Five, East could have played the Six with safety.) In this instance the rule of eleven is used effectively, although a card as low as a Four is led. Four from eleven leaves seven; therefore there are seven Spades higher than the card led not in the hand of the leader. East can see the whole seven in his own hand and in dummy and therefore can be sure that South has no Spade higher than the Four.

After East's Nine win, he should lead the King of Spades to trick 2; then the Ace of Hearts so as to be sure of cashing that card; and then a third Spade, which would enable West to cash his Ace and Queen and give the adversaries five tricks—enough to save game.

IF May 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:15 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4:50 p. m., and 8 p. m to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 5 a. m. to 7 a. m. and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m.

There will be sensed a feeling of worldly security on this date, and an unusually happy atmosphere will prevail. "Half the giant's strength is in the conviction that he is a giant." Progress along scientific and educational lines.

The child born on this date will have a boundless imagination, and a longing for travel and adventure. Its fabulous tales will be manifestations of an ambitious and a venturesome spirit, and will not be told to mislead It will do things impulsively.

You were born with a highly emotional nature, and to find life interesting you require to be incessantly thrilled. Your happiness may be said to depend almost entirely on the capacity of your environment to simulate you. Too many times your tired mind and body need rest instead of the excitement which you seek. Because a thrill is an emotional stimulant, it should be taken, like other stimulants, only in moderation. Do not take the pitcher to the well too often!

You have a runaway imagination, and you are apt to follow where it leads. Details do not concern you. You love ideas for their own sake, whether they are based on half facts or rumors. Your convictions, of course, are rather wobbly; they are usually on the winning or popular side. In your work you labor for the effect, which is usually original and artistic, and many times clever, but there are usually many weak points in your structures. Your best work is done in cooperation with others, who understand and can offset your peculiarities and weaknesses.

You can be generous and also niggardly. You can be very big in some ways, and very small in others; and you can be very brave and also very cowardly. With such a dualistic nature, it is difficult for others to understand you.

KEEPING CUT FLOWERS FRESH.

JUST now while flowers are so plentiful and so many are being sent to hospitals and carried from the suburbs into the cities, a few suggestions about prolonging their freshness may prove useful. One so often hears the statement: "I buy all my flowers from Mr. ——— because he always sends me flowers that he has just cut." Now, it will no doubt surprise these persons to be told that if Mr. ——— sent them flowers that had just been cut they would last less than 24 hours.

The florists cut their flowers early in the morning or late in the afternoon, first sprinkling and then plunging them up to their heads in jars of cold water, into which they have previously added ten drops of formaldehyde. Some add as a preservative a teaspoonful of soda to every pint of water, but the majority of florists use formaldehyde. When the jars are properly filled they are placed in dark refrigerators in summer and dark cellars in winter for ten hours, after which they are ready to be sent to the cut-flower stores.

This method is followed in order that the stems may become filled with water, which, of course, prolongs the life of the blossoms. Hard-wooded flowers, like the wild azalea, or any of the hardy shrubs, will keep much longer if before placing them in water you remove an inch or so of the outer skin of the stem or split the ends of the stem.

Soft-stemmed flowers, like nasturtiums, will keep fresh much longer if a bit of charcoal is kept in the water.

All cut flowers will absorb the water more rapidly if a few drops of camphor has been added to each pint of water.

Flowers that ordinarily will keep fresh for four days will last in good condition for at least eight days, and sometimes longer, if each night the receptacle in which they are standing is removed to some cool place.

Every morning all cut flowers should be removed from the water and one-half inch should be cut from the stems. They should be placed in fresh water. Should they be badly wilted, it should freshen them to immerse the stalks for half an hour in water as hot as your hand can stand (never scalding). While in the hot water keep them in the dark. After you take them from the hot water, dissolve a teaspoonful of salt in the cool water in which you are about to place them.

Never immerse thin-petaled flowers in water to revive them. If you do, you will find that the petals discolor. This, however, is just the treatment to give flowers with less delicate petals, like daffodils and tulips. Immersing such blossoms usually stiffens them and you can scarcely tell them from perfectly fresh blooms.

Never attempt to ship flowers until you are perfectly sure that their stems are completely filled with water. If you do not take this precaution, they will never reach their destination in good condition.

Wives of Tomorrow

"What's In a Name."

DEAR MISS McDONALD: Nosing about this world 75 years and more, I have never known a woman or girl named Alice that was not good—so good, many of them, that morally and socially they were so straight and strict that they lean over backward. There is something in that name that separates those who bear it from the ordinary sins and shortcomings of other mortals. Here comes one of them declaring that she can not forgive her husband's deceptions as she "hates a liar." Grandfather does not presume, for one moment, to challenge that statement. He believes that if a neighbor calls on Alice in the morning, she does not hide the dish cloth, try to conceal her first born's toys, smooth her hair or change a muscle in her calm and saintly face before she opens the door. Oh! No! Alice is such a paragon of truth that she would never stoop to such subterfuge to present a better appearance. Alice is the incarnation of truth and "hates a liar." She would scorn to put her right foot before the left lest her neighbor should think her house was different than it really is. Probably she does not "fix up" much when she throws a party. Alice could not be deceptive.

Alice's charming letter stirs my ancient memory to a day when several good fellows were seated about a lunch table in the staid city of Philadelphia. Some funny story told started talk about this very thing of lying to one's wife, on occasion. Every one present had done it freely and said so. Justification was not needed in that bunch, for all were men of discretion, not to say character and good judgment, and the least of them knew it was well at times not to tell all the truth, if not to cover it up and tell something else. It happened also that every one of those fellows was happily married and would have defended the good women at their sides with their lives.

But a queer thing happened at that party. One waggishly inclined chap present suggested the trial of a harmless experiment upon the wives. After some discussion it was agreed that we should all go over to Atlantic City, cut loose for a couple of days, and go to the limit in dissipation, amusement and reckless behavior. Then each was to go home and tell his wife the exact truth and all the truth, so far as he could remember it. We were to meet again in two weeks and compare notes. There were five in the party, and this, briefly, was their report:

No. 1 wife was convulsed with laughter, and when she could find her breath, asked, "Charley, when did you learn to be such a good liar?"

No. 2 wife listened with frank eyes directed at her husband. She did not even smile, and said, "John, I do not believe a word of it."

No. 3 wife listened amusedly, chuckled at the recital and asked mischievously, "Will, do men really enjoy that sort of thing?"

No. 4 wife listened with growing interest, and her reply was: "I am glad you went to the extreme in your enjoyment. Home seems better, does it not?"

No. 5 wife, of the clinging vine type, said, "You don't like drinking and those silly women; you are just a fool!"

You see, not one of those good women thought for a minute that the husband was telling the truth. The thing those men did was very far from their ordinary course of life. They had purposely sought to make an exaggerated impression.

Grandfather was No. 4 in this list and he confesses to shame at the rebuke of the calm creature who had then put up with him for a quarter of a century. The husband in this case never knew whether the wife believed his recital. Probably she did, for there was not much lying between us, but if she did, it never distressed her or soured her sweet spirit. Why does Alice permit human weakness to sour hers? Respectfully,

GRANDFATHER.

ECONOMISTS WARN RESERVE BOARD OF MONEY EXPLOITATIONS

Cash for Commerce Urged, Not Cent for Speculation

Dr. Beckhart Declares "Cheap Money" Policy of Bond Should Not Be Permitted to Boom Stock Market.

An interview between Irving Fisher, Professor of Economics, Yale University, and Benjamin Haggott Beckhart, Assistant Professor of Banking, Columbia University.

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., May 25.—In his two volumes on "The Federal Reserve System," Paul M. Warburg has struck two decidedly healthy notes. One is that despite the natural human desire on the part of men who contributed to the founding of this perhaps greatest public service institution in the world to get due credit for their work, the creative work of President Woodrow Wilson be not forgotten. Republicans have claimed the credit, saying the Federal Reserve act originated in the so-called Aldrich plan. Democrats have been as keen to show that Senator Aldrich's ways were not the Federal Reserve ways.

But Mr. Warburg generously quotes the dictum of Secretary David F. Houston, that, while the act creating the system was the "result of the labors of many men, extending over a long period," its final form and passage were "due to Woodrow Wilson, ably supported by McAdoo, Glass, and a few others." Second, Mr. Warburg makes several able proposals for bettering the system, especially in view of the recent stock market crash.

It is on these points that I have sought the opinion of a qualified financial critic, Prof. Benjamin H. Beckhart, of Columbia University. The interview with Dr. Beckhart follows:

"Do you agree in the main with Mr. Warburg in his proposals for reconstituting the Federal Reserve Board, embodied in his recent book on 'The Federal Reserve System'?"

"The various Secretaries of the Treasury, who have served since the board was established, have not been able to view Federal Reserve credit policies objectively. In their role as heavy borrowers in the money market and as members of administrations that desire to maintain or stimulate prosperity, they have been prone to give their support to 'cheap money' policies, though the effect of such was that of continuing conditions of artificial prosperity, and so of intensifying the business or speculative cycle.

"Mr. Warburg's suggestions would make for the development of sounder credit policies in minimizing the influence of the Treasury Department and in making the Federal Reserve Board less susceptible to 'political' control.

Suggest Increasing Membership.

"To preserve the authority and the competence of the Federal Reserve Board, and to render it free from Treasury domination, Mr. Warburg proposes that its membership be increased to twelve, by the addition of four members elected by the Reserve Banks, voting in groups of three. The board itself, he suggests, should appoint its own governor and vice governor, under a provision for rotation in office, who would serve respectively as chairman and vice chairman. The Treasury Department would no longer be represented by the Secretary, who is now chairman, but by the Undersecretary, and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency would be administered under the supervision and control of the board.

"The suggestion made by Mr. Warburg are quite similar to those contained in the report, dated January 10, 1930, of the special Federal Reserve committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, excepting that the report went a step further in proposing that the board be housed in its own building in Washington. They embody, too, some of the principles contained in the early drafts of the Federal Reserve Act, but which were changed, against the opposition of Carter Glass, and at the insistence of Secretary Bryan, who was motivated by what he considered to be the interests of the people."

"Have the successive reductions of the rediscount rate in New York open-market operations of the Federal Reserve Board since the panic, in your opinion, aided in making money more available for trade, checking unemployment and mitigating the effects of the business recession?"

"The open-market policies of the Reserve Banks, along with the heavy retirement of the currency and the gold imports, have made funds available, but without checking unemployment or mitigating the effects of the business recession. The reason is that business has not utilized the credit released and will not do so unless the funds may be profitably employed in trade or production, and such employment will itself depend on the revival of consumer demand."

Security Loans Increase.

"The proof that business has not made use of the funds released is to be found in the continuous drop in the 'all other' loans of the reporting member banks; while the rapid increase in security loans through March and April gives evidence of the manner in which the funds released have been employed. The increase of security loans in bank portfolios makes it highly debatable whether the open-market policies of the Federal Reserve Banks have not been carried to an extreme. As important as it is that central banks should supply the market with funds, when these are required by business, it is equally important that the qualitative aspects of commercial bank portfolios as well as the quantitative be considered. An increase in credit should not be prompted by the Reserve Banks, if it simply takes the form of security loans.

"It is equally questionable whether the lowering of the bank rate at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York has not been carried too far. It is generally regarded as good practice to have the bank rate stand above market rates, and while there might be some dispute as to what rate or rates constitute an index of the market, there would be no dispute but that the bank rate in force now at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York does stand far below the lending rates of the commercial banks in New York City."

"What measures, in brief, do you think should be taken to establish a proper control of credit operations in a way to prevent excessive speculation in securities and to stabilize the general level of prices? In this connection you may recall that Gov. Young, of the Federal Reserve Board, recently referred with approval to the practice in England of not granting a customer unlimited credit on the basis of security offered as collateral."

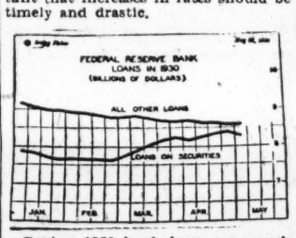
"The stabilization of the 'general level of prices' is largely a question of preventing speculation in commodities and securities, and so of avoiding the aftermath of credit liquidation and falling prices.

Limit to Bona-Fide Uses.

"In this, the Reserve Banks may play a role of paramount importance. Through open-market operations funds should be released only when these may be utilized in a bona-fide commercial transaction.

"It is generally conceded that the purchases of securities in 1927 were a mistake, sine the funds released simply formed the basis for a speculative movement in security prices. For a time cheap money prevailed, and the foreign exchanges were strengthened. But with the growing absorption of credit in security speculation, as millions and billions of dollars were drawn in to feed the insatiable appetite of the stock exchange, interest rates rose to panic levels and business through the world in consequence was demoralized.

"The speculative era might have been brought to a close earlier if the Reserve Banks had, in time, raised their rates of rediscount drastically, for rates of rediscount must be raised quickly and by a substantial percentage if they are to have their full psychological effect. At all times they should be held above 'market rates,' and should vary from Reserve district to Reserve district in accordance with the demand for 'capital' and the stage of economic development. The rate on advances to member banks might very well stand above the rate on rediscounts of customers' paper. It is all-important that increases in rates should be timely and drastic.



During 1930 bank loans on securities have trended upward, while commercial loans have gone down. "Easy money" fails to increase business.

Depend on Credit Too Much.

"Apropos of Gov. Young's remarks, the close relationship and the dependence of security trading in this country on the credit organization is an embarrassing and a limiting factor in the free development of credit policies on the part of the Reserve Banks. Every effort should be made to keep within reasonable bounds the credit required by the stock exchange. The absence of margin trading in Europe has made the dependence there much less and has more completely divorced the stock exchanges from the credit organizations."

"Might such a measure as you have outlined clear the way for an understanding with the central banks of the world for the purpose of checking the current world-wide depression in prices?"

"Dr. Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, once remarked that the credit policies of the Federal Reserve Banks should be predicated on the domestic business situation. This would give European central banks a greater feeling of security in the formulating of their own credit policies. His point of view was fully vindicated by the aftermath of the 1927 episode, brought on by the Reserve Banks disregarding the domestic situation, with resultant injury to world business. The economic and financial importance of the United States gives this country a dominating position in the credit organization of the world, and hence stability in credit policies is essential. To realize this goal, millions for the furtherance of production and commerce, but not one cent for speculative of fixed-capital use, should be the guiding principle of Federal Reserve policy."

Dollar Is Not Stable.

The averag individual fails to realize the value of a dollar is not fixed. Because gold is worth about $20 an ounce he considers the dollar stable. The price of gold is fixed only in terms of gold by weight, not in terms of things it will purchase. An increase of the amount of gold in circulation does not express itself in a lower price of gold, but in a higher level of prices for all other things.

ADVANCE RECORDED IN STOCK MARKET

Slow Rise in Evidence, With Definite Rallies at Close of Week.

NEW FAVORITES APPEAR

By JOHN W. LAIRD
(Irving Fisher Service).

Sagging tendencies which set in among most stocks on May 15 were shortlived, and a slow advance was in evidence last week, with definite rallying activity toward the close. At that time, however, the index of common industrials was fractionally below the level at the close of the week preceding. The present level is but little more than 1 per cent above that reached at the peak of the post-panic rally which culminated early in December of last year. It registers a gain of only 24 per cent over the low of 122.7 on November 13.

The sharp net decline in prices since April 11 is thus seen to have considerably deflated the gains made in the long upward movement which began in the last week of December.

New favorites made their appearance recently at the expense of some of the old ones in a series of exceptionally dull sessions. Motors made the sharpest advance for the week, then foods, tobaccos and rails. Chemicals, utilities and radios and theaters were off between 1 and 3 per cent, although a spirited uprush on Friday had caused an upturn in these divisions.

In all, five of the twenty groups made sufficient gains toward the close to show a gain over the week. If anything, trade and financial news was disappointing, as in the reports of lessened steel operations and the increase in brokers' loans, slight as it was, in the face of declining stock prices. In that aspect the shift to hitherto neglected groups from those previously enjoying market popularity may be significant of a period of accumulation. This theory receives added weight from the fact that trading interest is slack.

Dullness Rules Industrials.

Average daily value of trading in all stocks on the New York Stock Exchange continued its decline last week, and at $145,600,000 was 18 per cent below the average for the preceding week. Tradings in common industrials dropped almost as much, and at $104,700,000 were at the lowest level since the week ended January 23, when trading interest had only just begun to revive after the midwiner doldrums.

Fifteen of the twenty groups were off in value of tradings, to an extent greater than could be accounted for by price recessions. Utilities suffered the largest fall, one of $13,700,000; radios and theaters were off $7,200,000; oils, $5,000,000, and shrinkages of more than a million on the average occurred among the divisions of electrical equipment stocks, chemicals, miscellaneous and coppers.

Slight gains in value of shares traded appeared in the groups of farm machinery, rails, motors, building supplies and preferred stocks. Light trading, therefore, favored hitherto neglected groups at the expense of those recently most popular.

Movements at Cross Purposes.

The three largest European exchanges showed varying movement last week, continued decline being in evidence at London, steadiness at Paris and an upward trend at Berlin. That trend has now prevailed for three weeks, last week's rise of over 1 per cent bringing the index to nearly 91, highest since November 8, three weeks before the culminating break in Berlin. It marks a net recovery of nearly 10 per cent since then.

London stock prices fell after temporary improvement, losing nearly 1 per cent, and bringing net decline of the past six weeks to 5 per cent.

The Paris Bourse registered no change, with the level little above the last year low.

The index of 225 industrial common stocks shows what a substantially representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the list changing weekly. The last column of the table gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

All three groups were advancing at the end of the week.

Money Illusion Shown In Saving Bank Account

A working girl who in 1896 put $100 in the savings bank and let it accumulate at 3 per cent would now have nominally twice what she put in. But prices are more than two and a half times what they were in 1896, with corresponding decrease in purchasing power of the dollar; so that, in effect, she would be able to purchase less goods with her $200 than she could have bought in 1896 with her original $100. In other words, her thrift would have gone unrewarded.

COMMODITY LEVEL SEEN NEARING TURN

Further Declines Still Made in Index, but Bottom Believed at Hand.

NEW HIGH FOR DOLLAR

The wholesale commodity price level continued its decline still further last week, but gave strong evidences of being near the turning point. Although the index went off by 0.34 per cent from the preceding week to a mark of 88.4, there were seventeen individual commodity item rises against fourteen falls.

Heavy falls in a few groups outweighed the small gains in a larger number of items. The price level has been down for six weeks and hovers around the level of September, 1916.

The purchasing power of the dollar, reciprocating the action of the commodity price level, gained 0.44 per cent to record a new high of 113.2, with the 1926 average equaling 100. The dollar will buy more goods than at any time since 1916, but this deviation does not look so large when one considers the fact that in May, 1920, when the commodity price level reached its highest point—167.2—the purchasing power of the dollar was only 59.8 in comparison with 1926, the par year.

The heavy price falls last week in the nonagricultural group of commodities were the chief cause of the all-commodity price decline, despite a greater number of rises than falls in the entier list. Fuel and lighting took a loss of 2.91 per cent; petroleum and coal (navy standard) brought the group off against gains in stove, nut and pea coal. This group made conspicuous gains in a declining market from September 27 to February 14, was steady with a gradual downward trend to April 18, and then began a sharp decline, with a drop of 7.8 per cent in the last five weeks.

Building materials, metals and textiles were off slightly last week, while hides and leathers and miscellaneous commodities were up.

Farm products, with a good week in the grain markets, rose 0.53 per cent to counteract the losses of the past month. This brought about an increase of 0.55 per cent in the purchasing power of farm products, following the sharp decline of more than 1 per cent the preceding week. The trend has been steadily up since April 28.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM

On Anaconda Copper.

C. E. C.—I have been seriously considering buying about five shares of Anaconda Copper at the present market. Will you tell me something of the management of the company and the possibilities for long-term holding?

Answer—At prevailing prices and on the basis of current annual dividends of $7 a share, Anaconda Copper yields to the investor 11.5 per cent, a very attractive return. Management of the company is all that could be desired. While, as a result of recent sharp cuts in prices for copper metal, which, however, have been supplanted by a tendency to recover and a very attractive demand, it is likely that later on the present dividend will be lowered. Even in that event, the stock would still be regarded as very desirable for long-term holding, especially if bought outright.

Venezuela Speculations, Inc.

M. B. Z.—Please advise as to present standing of Venezuela Speculations, Inc., and if the stock is listed on any board? Also state what are the prospects for Dubilier Condenser Corporation?

Answer—Venezuela Speculations, Inc., not listed anywhere. On October 3, 1928, New York State Supreme Court at Brooklyn issued injunction restraining company from continuing to sell stocks and concessions in oil ventures. William Dubilier, a director and substantial stockholder in Dubilier Condenser Corporation, confirmed a report current near the close of 1929 that Western Electric Co., American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and subsidiaries had reached an agreement whereby Dubilier would receive royalties on all radio receiving sets made in future by first named concern. Apart from this, outlook for company does not appear overbright. Earnings for stock in 1929 amounted to only 56 cents a share.

Wants to Know Prospects.

E. E. C.—Please advise what are the prospects of the White Sewing Machine Co. continuing to pay its dividends on the preferred stock?

Answer—Can not indulge in conjecture as to whether or not dividends on the preferred will be continued. However, earnings for that issue have lately fallen off, though for 1929 they were substantially larger than the amount required to meet the dividend, having been $7.79 a preferred share, comparing with $10.71 in 1928. Earnings for the quarter ended March 31, 1930, were better than those in the corresponding period of 1929, net income of $18,950 resulting, after preferred dividend requirements, in a loss of only 40 cents a common share, comparing with a loss of 90 cents a common share in the corresponding quarter of 1929. The present preferred dividend has been maintained since May, 1926.

On Ford Motor Co., Ltd.

C. J. D.—I have been offered Ford Motor Co., Ltd., $22 per share by a brokerage firm on Madison avenue, New York City. Kindly advise me if the stock is a good buy?

Answer—Why purchase the stock from this firm when you can buy it on the Curb Market for $19 per share. On 100 shares this saving amounts to $300. Judging by such an offer the reliability of the broker is questioned. The stock itself has attraction, because it has the backing of Henry Ford. An initial dividend on the American depository receipts equal to 37½ cents per share was paid March 17 last. Earnings since organization in October, 1928, to December 31, 1929, were equal to 57 cents per share. If these earnings continue, stockholders should continue to share in the profits, although the initial dividend was for no fixed period. It would appear advisable to disregard the broker's offer. One offering the same stock on similar terms recently got into difficulties with the Federal authorities. If you desire to buy the stock, why not purchase it in the open market?

Question on Simmons Co.

E. A. H.—Please advise me as to the possibilities of Simmons Co. stock.

Answer—Despite the fact that the company on May 1 last ceased to pay the usual 1½ per cent stock dividend, the stock is quite well regarded from a speculative-investment viewpoint. Cash dividends of $3 annually are being paid, and on that basis the stock at present yields to the investor approximately 7.1 per cent. Company reports that sales of its new "Deepsleep" mattress in the first quarter of this year were on a constantly rising scale, while total sales of the company, including subsidiaries, for April amounted to $4,563,348, compared with $4,317,440 for the same month in 1929.

Data On Loew's, Inc.

D. F. H.—Kindly give me your opinion of Loew's, Inc., as an investment.

Answer—First quarter earnings were up sharply, when compared with the corresponding period last year, amounting to $5.56 a common share after preferred dividends, as against $3.35 a share for the first quarter of 1929. The higher earnings have led to rumors of an increase in the dividend from the present $3 rate to $5 or $6 annually. Earnings have been in an upward trend since 1921. Preferred dividends have been paid regularly, while payments on the common were increased from $2 to $3 per year with the declaration of a 75-cent quarterly dividend last December. Loew's, Inc., may be regarded as a conservative investment with considerable promise, in view of the steady improvement in earnings and the outlook for the motion-picture business.

High Cost of War Debt.

The war debts both in this country and in Europe have been, for the most part, contracted at high price levels. If we should drop back to the 1913 level of prices, it would almost double the burden of our national debt, for the Government would have to repay dollars almost twice as big in purchasing power as the average of those which it borrowed at the five Liberty Loan dates.

BOND INDEX NEAR HIGH FOR 1929-30

Nearly Half of 70 Selected Securities Show Rise During Week.

RAILS MAKE GOOD GAINS

Although the average daily value traded of all the bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange fell 13 per cent last week, the all-bond price index, computed on 70 bonds in the Irving Fisher index, gained 0.20 per cent. The index, at 101.5, was only 0.47 per cent below the high mark of 1929-30. This was reached on March 21 of this year, when the index stood at 101.83.

During last week 48 per cent of the 70 selected bonds showed rises, while 26 per cent fell, and 26 per cent showed no change.

Both first and second grade rails made substantial gains through the week. First grade rails bettered the preceding week's closing by 0.40 per cent, reaching the highest point since March 28, one week after the 1930 high. In the last four weeks this index gained 1.42 per cent.

Second grade rails reversed the decline of the preceding week with a 0.61 per cent gain last week. This is the first substantial rise in this group for nine weeks.

Public utilities, industrials and foreign government bonds continued their steadiness and showed very little fluctuation through the week. Utilities and foreign government bonds each gained but 0.08 per cent over the week's closing and industrials 0.02 per cent. United States Government bonds followed the rails in the order of increase and showed 0.25 per cent rise. At the close of the week this group was 4.03 per cent above the index of a year ago.

SPRING WHEAT HELD BACK BY WEATHER

COOL DAYS HALT CORN

Weather in the spring wheat belt was considerably below normal, holding back growth, but the crop is in general well stooled after recent rains. Winter wheat in the Northwest area is in good condition, and progress is generally good in the Southwest, except in spots where there has been too much rainfall.

Coolness in the eastern part of the corn belt, and low temperatures plus heavy rains in the western part, was unfavorable for germination last week, although moisture improved soil condition in the Ohio Valley, with much seeding done. Frost cut down early corn in northern Iowa.

A shift in conditions favored the eastern portion of the cotton belt, plantiful rainfall being generally harmful to western areas, except near the Gulf. Much cotton was washed out elsewhere on that side of the Mississippi, little cultivation and chopping being done. Beneficial showers lessened the irregularity previously caused by dryness in Eastern sections.

Showers in Virginia and the Carolinas greatly aided setting out of tobacco plants. Temperature and precipitation were also favorable to transplanting in southern Kentucky, field work extending northward.

MARBERRY STARS AS NATS WIN FROM RED SOX, 5-0

Pegler

CHICAGO, Ill., May 25.—Paddy Harmon, old lamplighter of the stockyards district of Chicago, a coarse character with no civic consciousness to speak of, has been unable to regain control of the Chicago Stadium, a monument to the altruism and high purpose of some of the more refined citizens. All persons interested in civic uplift and suppression of sordidness will be pleased to reflect upon this as it shows the better element at last have been able to score a first down against those who are undesirable socially and insensible to their civic obligations.

The stadium, bigger and more elaborate than the Garden Corporation's plant in New York, is supposed to have cost $6,000,000. Mr. Harmon built it, in a manner of speaking. That is, if Tex Rickard built the new Garden, Mr. Harmon built the Stadium, although in each case "built" is a rather loose term, for both boys actually put comparatively little money into their respective temples.

What they really did was promote them, interesting the so-called Great Big Men by appealing to their vanity as well as their cupidity.

Dollars Before Glory Kept in Mind.

This, of itself, was no trivial achievement in either instance because Great Big Men in all communities, while they are easily flattered, are slow to invest in projects which seem likely to pay off in civic pride. Both Mr. Rickard and Mr. Harmon had to convince their respective Great Big Men their stock would go up and the prestige accruing to them as public benefactors would be in the nature of extra dividend.

Mr. Harmon had alertness to make this appeal at a time when money was very plentiful among the Great Big Men of Chicago, most of whom were supporting American industry on margin. As I recall the early prospectuses, the boys were doing this principally to give their city an amphitheater second to none so that all manner of great athletic and dramatic spectacles and conventions should be attracted to their city, which seemed to be a very laudable purpose.

It may be even that, at the time, some of them actually did not give much consideration to the matter of stock vaues and cash dividends. Money was so loose beyond a certain amount, a man might have to pay $1.10 for every dollor of income, which made it expedient to risk a small dab of $50,000 in a futurity enterprise.

Money Tightens, Paddy Loses His Grip.

In the beginning, Mr. Harmon, old lamp lighter from the stock yards, was president of Chicago Stadium, but after some time, when money became less burdensome to the leading citizens of Chicago, the boys found foult not only with the management but with his personality as well.

Mr. Harmon had gone on from lamp lighting to operation of neighborhood dance halls and fight clubs. It was while he was operating a dance hall called Dreamland that he dreamed the idea of building the biggest indoor stadium in the world, and while

Tigers Defeat Browns In Battle of Bats

St. Louis, May 25 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Browns and the Detroit Tigers battled through nine wild, free-hitting innings this afternoon and when it was all over, the Tigers were on the long end of a 9-to-8 score. St. Louis used four pitchers and Detroit two in the melee, in which the Tigers collected fifteen and the Browns thirteen hits. Gehringer hit for the circuit in the first inning.

Net Favorites Win in City Tourney

Mangin, Judd, Shore Are Given Stern Opposition.

THE City of Washington tennis championships got under way on an even keel yesterday and not an upset had been recorded when the settling dusk halted play on the Rock Creek courts. Play was confined to men's singles in which all but one first round match were completed. The women will swing into action today at 5 o'clock, while the men will continue in second round countests.

Hungry pessimists were denied their food when Dooly Mitchell, seeded No. 1, came through in the third set to escape what had promised to be a surprise defeat at the hands of Muscoe Garnett, one of the better public parks players. The Georgetown University youth met a demand for his best tennis with an avalanche of well-stroked shots in the last three games to pull out his second round triumph by 6—2, 6—8, 6—3. He drew a bye in the first round.

Mangin Forced to Hustle.

Tom Mangan, the defending champion, was forced to hustle to beat Bill Seidell, of George Washington University, the veteran advancing to the second round on a victory of 6—4, 6—2 proportions. Frank Shore, District junior champion, Deane Judd and Alan Staaubley, another George Washington player, also had to travel at their fastest pace to win.

Shore encountered hard opposition from Leroy Thurtell, former University of Virginia star, but outlasted his adversary to win by 6—1, 9—7. Judd hooked up with Fred Dodge, formerly of Maryland University, in the last match of the day and just got under the wire a winner, 9—6, 6—3, before darkness intervened. Staubley gained a 7—5, 6—2 decision over Maurice Goubeau, University of Maryland freshman ace.

Considine Is Easy Winner.

Bob Considine, whom many observers predict will prove the man to beat for the title, easily disposed of Tom B. Thatcher, 6—2, 6—2, while Colin Stam and Maurice O'Neill, other seeded stars, triumped handily over Warren Bouve and John Yeomans, respectively. Considine's win placed him in the third round as he drew a first round bye.

The doubles entry list will close this afternoon at 5 o'clock and pair-

Shamrock VI Breaks Rudder; Is Docked

Portsmouth, England, May 25 (A. P.).—The Shamrock VI, new racing boat of Sir Thomas Lipton, damaged her rudder in coming here from South End Friday, it was learned today.

The vessel was docked yesterday and the repair work was rushed through the day so that the boat may be ready for the important series of test races to start in the Solent Wednesday. In these tests the Shamrock will receive no time allowance.

Lyons in Sixth Straight Wins as Indians Bow

Cleveland, May 25 (A.P.).—Ted Lyons won his sixth straight victory and brought his record for the season to eight wins and one defeat when he held the Indians to four hits here today and beat them 9 to 1.

The White Sox pounded three Cleveland pitchers for sixteen hits and were assisted by some ragged defensive play on the part of the Indians.

Carl Reynolds and Bill Cissell with three hits apiece, led the Chicago batting attack.

Jones Holds Chief Interest On Eve of British Amateur

By FRANK H. KING.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 25 (A.P.).—Sunday is a rest day in St. Andrews, although the world of golf, including America's victorious Walker Cup Team has come to the old gray town of Fifeshire for the British Amateur Championship starting tomorrow.

By law not a single golf shot violates the Sabbath peacefulness of the game's ancient shrine. Six days a week the famous stretch of links land from Swilken Burn to Eden Firth is a golf course, but on the seventh it is only a promenade for townsfolk and cosmopolitan visitors.

Hands that itch for golf on Sunday here must be taken to Glen Eagles, 60 miles into the highlands and there most of the Americans, including Bobby Jones, motored today. Only a few of them, however, played.

Laws Fail to Silence Golf Gossip.

Laws can't silence golf gossip and on the eve of what is likely to be a most spectacular tournament, the talk of the town revolves about Bobby Jones and his chances of capturing the only major golf title which has evaded his magic clubs, not because Jones is the only American capable of winning but because, to Scots, the Atlantan is the world's greatest exponent of their national pastime. Their interest in his forthcoming matches will be almost as intense as in his own home town and country.

In medal play or 36-hole matches, little doubt would exist that Jones would be the possessor of the title by Saturday night, but British tradition is that 18-hole matches and a 36-hole final best expresses the spirit of golf and by that test Jones will win or lose. His test next week is to win seven 18-hole matches in four days—he has no match on Tuesday—then play the 36-hole finals on Saturday.

After Jones, the American conceded the best chance of reaching the finals are Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, American amateur champion;

G. U. GOLFERS WOODMONT WINNERS

Flanagan, Wilson Upset Thorn, Shorey by 1-Up Score.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

MARK FLANAGAN and Richard H. Wilson, members of the Georgetown University Golf Team, yesterday defeated Mel Shorey, East Potomac Park professional, and Arthur B. Thorn, Woodmont professional, in an eighteen-hole match played on the course of the Woodmont Club, 1 up. Victory for the Georgetown players came on the final green, when Flanagan ran down a 15-foot putt for a birdie 3.

The gallery which followed the match was treated to an exhibition of golf as it should be played, for Flanagan and Wilson had a best ball of 68, while the professionals scored a best ball of 69. Each of the last four holes was played in birdies, the best ball of the quartet for the inward nine being only 29 strokes. The cards:

Stephen Winner in Sweepstakes.

The sweepstakes at the Woodmont Club yesterday resulted as follows: Class A, A. J. Stephen, 90—22—68, winner; Max Weyl, 78—9—69, runner-up. Class B, Sidney Reizenstein, 98—35—63, winner; Julian Reis, 98—32—66, and Harold Ganns, 106—40—66, tie for runer-up.

The eighteen-hole medal play handicap tournament scheduled for yesterday at the Indian Spring Club was postponed until next Sunday.

The golf championship of the Veterans' Bureau was won yesterday by Leo F. Pass, who defeated Norman J. Hall, 5 and 4, in an eighteen-hole match played on the course of the Bannockburn Club. Pass, who started with a birdie three on the first hole and captured another birdie on the third hole, was out in 39 and was then two up. He steadily increased his lead until the match ended on the fourteenth green, when Pass secured another birdie. The players then

Robins Nose Out Giants On Error by H. Critz

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 25 (A.P.).—An error by Hughey Critz permitted the Robins to win a 4-to-3 decision over the New York Giants here today after Adolfo Luque, veteran Cuban pitcher, held the men of McGraw to four hits in ten innings.

Clarence Mitchell, who had replaced Genewich on the mound for New York, set the stage for the winning rally when he permitted Frederick and Gilbert to lead off with singles. Herman sacrificed and Flowers rapped sharply to Critz, who, with a play at the plate in prospect, fumbled.

An error by Flowers in the eighth coupled with three of the Giant hits permitted the Giants to score three runs and carried the game into overtime.

U. S., MEXICO END PLAY TODAY

Davis Cup Singles and Exhibition Booked at Chevy Chase.

WITH the United States already holding a victory by virtue of a 3-to-0 count, the American zone Davis Cup finals will be concluded this afternoon in two singles contests on the Chevy Chase Club courts with John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., opposing Ricardo Tapia, 20-year-old star of the Mexican Team, and John Doeg, of California, engaging Frederick Sendel. Play will commence at 2:30 o'clock.

Interest in today's play centers on the Van Ryn-Tapia battle, in which the young Mexican is expected to repeat his brilliant performance of last Thursday against Wilmer Allison. Although losing, Tapia's tennis was something to marvel at, for his slight physical build belied the fact that he was capable of offering a strenuous argument for one of the aces of the American contingent.

Following the two singles matches, an exhibition doubles will be played between teams picked from the United States and Mexico squads.

Mahaffey Blanks Ruth and Gehrig, Scatters 7 Hits.

Athletics Hit Timely; Simmons Is Leader; Pipgras Loses.

NEW YORK, May 25 (A.P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics finally halted the Yankee sluggers today after four straight defeats and won the final game of their series, 10 to 3.

Leroy Mahaffey, recruit right-hander, turned the trick where his more famous mates had failed, holding New York to seven hits and shutting out Babe Ruth entirely. Tony Lazzeri and Dusty Cooke made the only Yankee homers, both in the fourth inning.

Athletics Hit Timely.

The Athletics mixed timely hitting with Yankee errors to score. They hit eleven times and the Yanks committed four errors. George Pipgras, who started for New York, was wild, and Roy Sherid not much better. Ed Wells finally finished the game.

Reds Finally Score; Split Bill With Bucs

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 25 (A.P.).—After losing ten straight games, the Reds came out of their slump here today by winning the second contest of a double bill from the Pirates by a count of 4 to 3. Pittsburgh won the first encounter, which went ten innings, 6 to 5.

Spencer, who went to the hill for the Pirates after the Reds had knotted the count in the first game by scoring twice in the ninth off Kremer, tripled and scored the winning tally on Grantham's sacrifice. Larry Benton, former Giant hurler, pitching his first game for the Reds, turned in a fair exhibition in the first game, but was taken out in the ninth for a pinch hitter.

RIGHT TO CHIN FAVORITE PUNCH, SAYS SCHMELING

Sharkey's Foe Also Has Powerful Left Hook.

By MAX SCHMELING.
(As told to Jimmy Powers).

ENDICOTT, N. Y., May 25.—I am now polishing up my favorite and most effective knockout punch. Each fighter has a certain pet punch, just as each golfer has a certain pet iron or wood that he likes to use and has the most confidence in. I might also say that it is the cause of biggest thrill and most enjoyment.

My favorite knockout punch is a short bee-line right smash to the chin. I have heard of knockout punches that travel only 6 inches, but I doubt if a large heavyweight's arm can generate enough paralyzing speed in 6 inches. My favorite punch travels about 16 to 18 inches with the shoulder loose, the elbow flexed and the point of contact between the lower edge of the chin and the middle of my knuckles.

Right Has Proved His Best Weapon.

I have knocked out more opponents with this delivery and consequently I am confident of its effectiveness and concussion. I understand that Jack Dempsey's favorite punch was a left hook to the chin. Jack always liked to elft-hook an opponent when he had his choice. Of course, different styles call for different punches and a man who keeps his chin tucked in the curve of his left shoulder and keeps it glued there is hard to hit with a right because of that protecting left shoulder. He is open for a left hook.

I have knocked out men with left hooks to the chin. I knocked down Joe Seykra in this fashion. I also hit John Risko with a left hook but the real finisher came with that favorite right smash to the chin.

Some fighters find it difficult to hit a man who is going away all the time. They find they can not set themselves firmly to anchor their feet but have to step in to deliver the knockout punch. I have had very good luck hitting a man going away from me. I dropped Joe Monte in this fashion in Madison Square Garden in my first appearance there.

Put Risko Out With Right.

Many times you get in a fight and you never find an opportunity to use that favorite punch. It all depends on the tide of battle. I kept working and plugging away with hooks to the belly at Risko before I got him to lower his hands so I could get a shot at his jaw. Then out came the old pet punch and it was all over.

Some fighters who have a reputation for being sluggers are often not as hard or punishing a hitter as others. Take the case of Gunboat Smith. He was the reverse. Here was a really paralyzing puncher but he never received the credit and publicity he deserved. Fighters respected him, however. A fighter is in there after all, and he ought to know when he is getting clipped, ja!

St. Joseph's, 10; Army Medicos, 2.
Anacostia Eagles, 10; Columbia Heights, 4.

ST. JOSEPH'S A. C. and the Mohawk A. C. nines scored their second consecutive victories yesterday in the District section of the Capital City League. The Anacostia Eagles and the Woodmen of the World teams made their respective debuts by scoring decisions over rival contenders. The Burroughs A. C. Nine turned in its first win in the other contest.

The Army Medicos dropped their second game to the Saints at Walter Reed, 10 to 2. Snyder held the Soldiers to five hits, while his mates hit Wood and Lewis frequently.

With Deuterman working effectively and Geuthler and Dean leading the attack, the Mohawks ran up an early lead and coasted to victory over the Skinker Bros. Eagles on Friendship Field, 9 to 4.

Foxall A. C. Loses In Ninth.

Foxall A. C. gained a big lead over the Woodmen, but could not hold the advantage. The Woodmen rallied for four runs in the ninth and romped off with an 11-to-10 decision.

Three Columbia Heights hurlers failed to halt the slugging veterans of the Anacostia Eagle Nine on the Congress Heights diamond. The Eagles took a 10-to-4 decision, counting three runs in the seventh and eighth innings. Goodwyn worked in great style for the winners and also figured in the attack. Tom Sweeney, Johnny Bleir, Tommy Ford and Sugrue also hit well. Dick Keefer was the big gun for the losers.

The Aztecs were unable to do much with the slants of Reid, and took a 5-to-1 setback at the hands of the Burroughs tossers, on Burroughs Field.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Hyattsville, 3; Berwyn, 1.
Mt. Rainier, 6; Bowie A. C., 4.

ALL visions of a walkaway race for any of the contenders for the Prince Georges County section championship of the Capital City League were dispersed yesterday. The Mount Rainier A. C. tossers turned back the champion Bowie A. C. Nine, 6 to 4, at Bowie, while Berwyn was bowing to Hyattsville, 3 to 1, at Riverdale, and the Brentwood Hawks were holding the Dixie Pigs to a 4 to 3 decision at Seat Pleasant.

Although all games were close, only the Mount Rainier Nine succeeded in upsetting the dope. The Mounts started on a rampage from the outset and scored five runs before Bowie called new pitching talent into play. The damage had been done, however.

Hurling Duels Order of Day.

Tack Ensor and Babe Clapper engaged in an old-fashioned hurling duel at Seat Pleasant. Neither held much advantage. The Pigs bunched most of their offensive in the sixth for three runs to come from behind and put over the winning run in the eighth. Millard made his bow behind the plate for the Hawks and proved a tower of strength. Joseph's sacrifice scored the deciding tally for the Dixies.

Tom Mudd and Giddings waged a real pitching duel at Riverdale. Berwyn tied the count at one-all in the ninth, but the Hiser clan got busy in its half and put over the deciding tally. Berwyn outhit the winners, 4 to 4.

Legion Pitcher to Get Trial With Nationals

Uniontown, Pa., May 25 (A.P.).—Joseph Smith, 17, Redstone Township High junior, so impressed Walter Johnson, manager of the Washington Nationals, as pitcher during a tryout Saturday at Washington that Johnson asked Smith to go South with him next season to training camp, according to M. E. Meiner, local sportsman, who accompanied Smith. Young Smith, right-hander, turned in sensational performances last year while pitching for Uniontown American Legion Junior Baseball Team and, mainly through his efforts, Uniontown made its way to sectional semifinals at Washington, D. C., where the team was eliminated. . .

De Paolo Earns Place In Indianapolis Classic

A crowd which was announced as 32,000 visited the Indianapolis motor speedway to watch the qualifying trials and to see other pilots practice for the eighteenth annual running of the classic.

A field of 21 cars and drivers has qualified to date for the race. Others will have their opportunity Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Hamilton's Slab Work Feature as Celtics Win

Alexandria, Va., May 25.—A fifth inning rally for two runs enabled the St. Mary's Celtics to erase a one-run disadvantage and defeat the Washington Red Sox in an exciting, closely contested game here today. Pitcher R. Hamilton, for the winners, bested Booker in a brilliant mound duel, yielding but two hits, while his mates found Booker for only six. Each struck out ten batters. Robbins made both hits for the Red Sox, getting a home and a single. Ludlow and Zimmerman crashed circuit clouts for the Celtics.

Virginia's Golf Team Had Successful Season

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 25.—The University of Virginia Golf Team made an excellent record during the first season in which this sport has been recognized by the General Athletic Association.

Duke University was defeated, 14 to 4, and the Medical College of Virginia by the same score. Two matches were won from the University of Richmond, 11 to 8 and 14 to 4. William and Mary was tied, 9 to 9, and the only reverse of the season was a 10½ to 7½ defeat at the hands of North Carolina.

Reginald Loftus, of Washington, D. C., captained the team through its first season.

Bobby Jones' Father Wins Atlanta Event

Atlanta, May 25 (A.P.).—Bobby is not the only member of the Jones family who can win golf tournaments. Ask his dad.

While Robert T., jr., was firing a 71 over the St. Andrews course in Scotland Saturday in preparation for the British amateur championship, his father—Big Bob—won the one-day handicap meet staged here at Eastlake Country Club. Big Bob shot a 78 and had a 10 handicap, giving him a net score of 68 and first place.

BREAKS WORLD MARK.

Pietermaritzburg, Natal, May 25 (A. P.).—Marjorie Clarea bettered the listed world's record for women in the 80-meter hurdles today, when she was timed in 121-5 seconds.

LEAGUE LEAD GAINED BY BALLSTON

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Ballston, 6; Cherrydale, 3.
Jefferson, 2; Woodlawns, 0.

BALLSTON A. C. regained undisputed possession of first place in the Virginia section of the Capital City League yesterday by trimming the Cherrydale Firemen, 6 to 3, while the Jefferson District Firemen were earning a 2-to-0 decision over Pop Wood's previously unbeaten Woodlawn.s

Both contests were closely contested, pitching proving the deciding factor in each. Durham, of Jefferson, and King, of Woodlawn, staged as warm a duel as seen on a Virginia diamond in seasons. Durham limited the Woodlawns to three hits and but five were collected off King.

McGolrick Victor On Mound.

McDonald and McGolrick toiled on the mound for their respective teams in the Ballston-Cherrydale clash. Although were touched freely at times, they bore down successfully in the pinches. McDonald faired the worst of the two. Not until the ninth, when they scored twice, were the Cherries able to show any strong signs of a scoring punch. Johnson and Coppage were chief aggressors for the winners. Bottelar was the only batsman to hit safely twice in the Jefferson-Woodlawn battle.

GAME FRIDAY.

Colonials vs. Kensington, Wheaton diamond, 3 o'clock.

SLAMMING nineteen hits, many for extra bases, the Takoma Tigers yesterday defeated the Chevy Chase Grays, 11 to 7, at Chevy Chase and stepped to the fore in the race for the championship of the Montgomery County section championship of the Capital City League. The defeat, its first, dropped the Chevy Chase Nine into a tie with Rockville A. A., which hammered out a 14-to-4 victory over the Bethesda Firemen yesterday at Rockville.

Only their vicious bats enabled the Tigers to turn in the victory. Although the Grays gathered but six hits off Pope and Oehmann, they made things interesting for their rivals throughout, profiting by five bases on balls and timely bingles. Edgar Duvall went the route for the Grays but was touched lively in the closing rounds.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

SKIN AND BODY HEAT.

CHILDREN have more skin surface in proportion to weight than adults have. This difference is so great that it must be taken into consideration in making metabolism tests, in planning diets and in providing clothing. The skin is the most important of all the organs in regulation of body heat and it is of great importance in maintaining the proper amount of water in the tissues. All of which means that the weight and texture of children's clothing is a matter of importance outranking the clothing of adults.

Drs. Snelling and Brown report on their investigation of fabrics for cold and cool weather wear. They compare wool and cotton fabrics, different types of weaves, two layered fabrics, and treated fabrics, such as mercerized and rayon, and the effects of bleaching. The points covered are the ability of a fabric to keep the skin warm, what are the effects of moisture on the fabric, how much does the fabric irritate the skin and certain economic qualities such as relative cost, durability and how does it wash.

They do not report on the ability of light to penetrate, the absorption of ultraviolet or heat. They touch ventilation only indirectly, and that through a report on porosity. So far as heat retention is concerned wool is superior to cotton and mixtures of wool and cotton are superior to cotton alone. Mercerized cotton is colder than unbleached cotton, and rayon is still less warm.

The weave is an item of importance. Two-layered fabrics, one side wool and the other cotton, are almost as warm as wool alone, the two being of the same weight. The rate of water absorption is a matter of importance especially for diaper material. A drop of water placed on bleached cotton or birdeye is absorbed at once.

Rayon and bleached cotton absorbs at about the same rate. Flannelette absorbs much more slowly, while canton flannel, fleece lined flannel, unbleached cotton, wool and cotton and woolen cloth in layers absorb very slowly. Wool irritates many skins. In some it causes eczema. Both wool and rayon stand routine laundrying poorly. For diaper material the authors recommend knitted bleached cotton. For underwear they seem to prefer two layered fabrics, one side wool and the other cotton.

OXALIC ACID ASH.

M. N. writes:

1. How much oxalic acid ash is there in pumpkin and banana?

2. How much fats and what kinds, may a case of arthritis, duodenal ulcer, infected gall bladder safely take?

3. Can such a case drink sassafras tea?

REPLY.

1. I have not found the answer to this question in any book. I am sure both are very low in oxalates, since both are alkali-ash foods.

2. Of these three diseases, infected gall bladder is the only one in dieting, for which there is need of regulating fats. Persons with infected gall bladders will do well to eat fats sparingly. This applies also to egg yellow.

3. Sassafras tea in moderation will do no harm.

IT'S ALL PURE BUNK.

M. B. P. writes: Some time ago I read a short article about the effects of sleeping with the head at different points of the compass. Because of electric currents the writer said that certain directions were good and others bad. I do not remember the directions, but one, he said, was so injurious that to sleep with the head in that direction was suicidal. Please tell us if there is anything in it.

REPLY.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

Curtain Stretchers.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

Curtain stretchers are a help in laundering curtains and other articles that can not be ironed and are best dried in shape. Those of substantial construction, with rustproof pins, adjustable clamps and a scale of measure stamped on the frame are best. It is possible to produce frames with strips of metallic bristles on the edges which admit of stretching without leaving the resultant scallops so commonly seen on laundered curtains. Curtain stretchers can also be made at home by winding strips of wood with heavy cloth, to which the curtain or other article may be pinned.

Clothes Sprinklers.

A spray head attached to a cork that may be fitted into a medium-sized bottle makes an excellent clothes sprinkler. A round whisk broom is also good for this purpose. These devices give a finer spray, sprinkle more evenly, and do the work in less time than the hand method.

MEMORIAL SERVICE OBSERVED ON RIVER BY UNION VETERANS

Flowers Strewn on Potomac to Commemorate Those Who Died at Sea.

RITES ARE OBSERVED FOR AIRMEN AND NUNS

Ceremonial Friday Centers Around Pilgrimage to Arlington.

Preliminary memorial services for the heroes of the Civil War, antecedent to the national ceremonies which will be held on Friday, were sponsored yesterday by various organizations in the District.

Two Army transports, one carrying members of the Grand Army of the Republic and the other laden with representatives of the Women's Relief Corps of the G. A. R., left the navy yard at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and, with observance of full ritual ceremonies, strewed flowers on the Potomac in memory of the soldiers, sailors and marines who died at sea.

A memorial service for airmen was commemorated at Francis Scott Key Bridge at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon by the Women's Relief Corps, and at the same hour the ladies' auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians held services at the Nuns of the Battlefield Monument at Rhode Island and Connecticut avenues, in memory of the nuns who nursed in the Army during the Civil War.

Poppies Scattered by Planes.

An impressive program was followed at the Key Bridge rites, the Women's Relief Corps ritual service, conducted by Mrs. Delia L. O'Brien, president of the Department of the Potomac, W. R. C., being followed by the release of a flock of pigeons by a Boy Scout troop and the scattering of poppies over the river by a squadron of Army planes.

James T. McCarthy, president of the Commodore John Barry Division of the A. O. H., acted as master of ceremonies at the services at the nuns' monument, and Dr. Ellen Ryan Jolly, of Pawtucket, R. I., whose activities were instrumental in erection of the monument, delivered a brief address extolling the unselfish services of the nuns in wartime.

Members of Stephen P. McGroarty, Lafayette and Lincoln Posts, American Legion, held services at Fort Lincoln Cemetery yesterday morning, followed by services by Sergt. Jasper Post at Prospect Hill Cemetery at noon, while at the same hour Vincent B. Costello Post and Belleau Wood Post conducted services at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Evening Services Held.

Legionnaires of Quentin Roosevelt Post visited Battleground National Cemetery during the afternoon, and in the evening services were held by James Reese Europe and James E. Walker Posts in Zion Baptist Church.

At 7 o'clock this evening Victory Post and auxiliary will assemble at Hains Point to place a wreath on the waters of the Potomac in memory of the naval dead, while during the afternoon graves in Holy Rood and Oak Hill Cemeteries will be decorated by George E. Killeen Post and other veterans' organizations.

Poppies and flags will be placed at the markers on Sixteenth street extended at 5 o'clock by the American Gold Star Mothers, assisted by Commander Knight and by Victory and Killeen Posts.

Pilgrimage to Arlington.

The major memorial ceremonies will take place Friday, when veterans of the G. A. R., together with veterans of more recent conflicts, will assemble at 9 o'clock on Pennsylvania avenue for the pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery.

Representative Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont; Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of the National Park and Planning Commission, and Dr. Thomas E. Green, of the American Red Cross, will be speakers at the cemetery, in the absence of President Hoover, who will deliver the Memorial Day address at Gettysburg.

Col. F. J. Young, commander of the Department of the Potomac, will call the assemblage to order at Arlington in the amphitheater at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, will be speaker at exercises to be held Friday afternoon at Battleground National Cemetery. The flag will be raised by Capt. Herbert Turner, and "orders of the G. A. R." will be read by R. J. F. McElroy. There will be an elaborate program, of which appropriate music will be a feature.

Special Memorial Day services are planned also by Boy Scouts, Spanish War Veterans, Georgetown University Law School, the various civic organizations, Government departments and other organizations.

Marine Regiment Under Formation

Civilian Organization Will Be Given Training at Quantico.

Representing a new idea in military training never attempted before, the new Twentieth Marines Reserve Regiment is rapidly being organized in the District, Maryland and Virginia for two weeks training under actual field conditions at Quantico, Va., beginning July 6.

Officers and men of the newly formed military organization are being recruited from all walks of life. One other regiment in the United States, formed under the same plan, exists at the present time and that is the Nineteenth Marines in the area of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The chief purpose of this new organization is to recruit men of a superior physical and mental type to receive training during time of peace for first line service in event of a national emergency.

BAKER CASE CAPTIVE TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Mental Specialists Will Continue to Question Murder Suspect.

POLICE GRILLING HALTS

Mental specialists attached to Walter Reed Hospital will today continue their sanity tests of Private Harold L. Brewster, who confessed and denied the killing of Mary Baker.

Brewster will be taken to the institution under guard early today. Doctors on the medical board last night said that he will be placed under observation for at least a day. Authorities have announced that they will not question the suspect until the alienists have completed their work.

Maj. William C. Porter and Maj. Patrick S. Mattigan, psychiatrists of Walter Reed Hospital, and Maj. Charles L. Maxwell, head of the medical board, designated at the request of Capt. A. R. Bolling, will conduct the examination.

Brewster's statements were being checked yesterday by Department of Justice agents and police. Several flaws in his repudiations are occupying the attention of police. Brewster will be brought back to the barracks of headquarters company, to which he is attached, following the examination at Walter Reed.

CHURCH OF PILGRIMS DEDICATION IS HELD

1,500 Attend Services as Dr. William Ray Dobyns Delivers Address.

EDIFICE COST $450,000

Dr. William Ray Dobyns, retiring moderator of the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, delivered the dedicatory address yesterday morning at the Church of the Pilgrims, Twenty-second and P streets northwest.

More than 1,500 persons were in attendance at the services, including visitors from the church's assembly which is in session in Charlottesville, Va. They were invited to attend by the Rev. Andrew R. Bird, who visited the conference for that purpose.

The Rev. D. Clay Lilly, who was chairman of the general assembly's stewardship committee in 1920, delivered the dedicatory prayer at the close of the sermon yesterday morning.

Last night the evening service was preceded by an organ recital by Warren F. Johnson, and the Rev. James I. Vance dedicated the pulpit and communion taole. The organ, which was given in memory of Sarah E. Morrison, was dedicated by the Rev. Neal L. Anderson.

The Church of the Pilgrims was built largely by contributions from the Southern States, and is supposed to be a representative church of the Southern Presbyterians. The pews were donated by various communities in the South, and are marked by tablets giving the name of the donors. The entire edifice was erected at a cost of over $450,000.

GROTTO MINSTRELS ARE WELL RECEIVED

Mountaineers Star Program in Which Amateurs Also Make Good.

SCORE OF PERFORMERS

Plenty of Washingtonians have paid much more money and received far less in the way of entertainment than was passed out at the National Theater last night when Kallipolis Grotto, A. O. N. M. S., gave the one and only performance of its 1930 minstrels.

There was not a dull moment from curtain to curtain, and the audience had no way to separate the amateur entertainers from the professionals. The production was notably free from those technical defects which are generally expected in most one-night offerings of the sort.

The feature of the evening by far, and perhaps obviously, was the Hill Billies, whose radio broadcast have brought them up among the Nation's antenna favorites. But not until television is perfected will radio fans be able to enjoy these Blue Ridge mountainers in all their glory. Their poise indicates that it has been quite some time since they dodged "revenooers" in their native fastnesses, but they have not forgotten the mannerisms of the hills, which constitute more than half their act.

Next in order of merit were Pete and Walter Oliver, in the minstrel half. These two end men presented musical novelties, featuring a piano duo, that brought plenty of well-deserved applause from the none too sizeable audience. The last four rows, among other seats, were empty, and it is truly a pity that there were not more customers to partake of the excellent entertainment offered, not only by the Oliver brothers but by all the rest of the score or more of performers.

All of the gags swapped between the interlocutor, Charlie Shackelford, and his end men, were clever and well received, including those few which some might have heard before, and the program contained also a satisfying quantity of melody, rhythm and dance numbers.

Vocal numbers by Barney Puck, Eddie Clark, Billy Zeitler, William Raymond and Randall Harlan were all important items on the bill, while a banjo and vocal number by Lee O'Haire and Billy Zeitler and a dance specialty by Spotty Harvey and Jimmie Saeger were equally well presented and received.

x The minstrel circle, which made up the first half of the bill, was replaced in the second half by a series of five vaudeville numbers, with the Hill Billies closing. The Silver String Revelers, assisted by Ethel Adrian, a cute blonde in a real grass skirt, kept the audience in good humor, while Pauline Loria drew good applause with a group of blues songs. Mary Deery twirled a pair of high-tension heels in a fine tap number.

Woman Hopes to Present Peace Pageant in Capital

Iris Vera Vincent in Washington to See School Superintendent on Presentation by Pupils of "Road to Rainbow" on Armistice Day.

Hoping to hold the world premiere of her international peace play, "The Road to the Rainbow," in the National Capital, Miss Iris Vera Vincent, poet, playwright and author, is in Washington to see r. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and perhaps r. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior.

The play-pageant, which is a symbolic drama of the League of Nations, is the work of several years. If it obtains local support, Miss Vincent would train istrict school children for the various roles and present the pageant on Armistice Day.

Miss Vincent has a letter from Dr. Albert Shiels, former member of the District Board of Education and now a professor of civic education at the Teachers College, Columbia University, highly recommending the play. She also has indorsements of Max Reinhardt and other authorities on the drama.

In writing the pageant Miss Vincent has evolved a combination of colors, adapted from all nations, that she uses as a symbol of the international flag and also the emblem of peace. She intends to send this to Geneva.

"The Road to the Rainbow" was written several years ago, while Miss Vincent was in South Africa lecturing on the League of Nations.

"Unless we realize that it is the dramatic value of war—its spectacular pageantry, its pomp and glory (false though it be)—that lures men to battle," she commented yesterday, "and unless we dramatize peace to offset this, we shall take a long time to impress peace ideas on the world."

The pageantry is consequently virile and constructive, as well as instructive, its author contends. Miss Vincent believes that it will appeal to all classes while it transmits a plea for world peace.

THE NEW WEEK'S FILMS

RKO-KEITH

By NELSON B. BELL

Expanded beyond the rigid limitations of the stage to embrace something of the ghastly horror of No-Man's Land and the sanguinary spectacle of a trench raid, "Journey's End," the picture, is still a masterpiece of grizzly realism that may be relied upon to move audiences as profoundly as the grim drama of the front line from which it was adapted.

"Journey's End" is not at all a dramatic study of war in the abstract. It is a tense and penetrating analysis of its effect upon a specific group of characters, detailed for a six-day period to the hell that was the first-line trench, hot against the German wall of fire and iron before St. Quentin in the spring of 1918. Here a company commander and his meager staff are trapped in the hideous game that leaves deep scars upon the minds and hearts of men. To the detachment comes a young lieutenant fresh from school, whose sister is the betrothed of his captain. About this little band of a half-dozen Mr. Sheriff has woven a play of heroic fiber against a somber background of human insignificance, tragedy and pathos.

There are, to be sure, frequent intervals of what the theater denominates comedy relief, but the manner of their achievement is such as to heighten rather than diminish the consciousness of the pathetic helplessness of the gallant men who live their days face to face with death.

Since this is a play of the British army, it is highly fitting that the picture's cast should be predominantly English. Colin Clive, the original Captain Stanhope, of the English stage production, is acutely incisive as the hard-bitten commander who drowns both his fear and his compassion in whisky. It is a fine revelation of his ability as an actor, it seems to me, that his hard-cocked moments are no more valid than those later ones in which he gives way to his grief in the deserted dugout.

The most sympathetic role in this entirely masculine drama is that of Lieut. Osborne, played with a simple but deep sincerity by Ian MacLaren. In this kindly ex-schoolmaster are combined the patient tolerance and the splendid balance that hold more explosive temperaments in check. It is a shrewdly drawn character superbly played. Matched with this are the excel'ent performances of David Manners, as Lieut. Raleigh, and Anthony Bushell as Lieut. Hibbert, the craven who derives a sort of false comfort and courage from the knowledge of his captain's own terror, mitigated only by drink. Billy Bevan, as Lieut Trotter, and Charles Gerrard, Private Mason, the cook, are plaintively comic in a droll game where Death holds all the cards.

To the American ear many of the pronunciations and intonations of these skillful actors will sound a bit odd. For instance, "Rally" will seem to be the name of Lieut. Raleigh to any one not wholly familiar with London accents. And there is, too, one serious lapse in direction, to my mind. That is in the final scene of the play, when Raleigh is dying in Stanhope's arms and the big push of the Germans is supposed to be at its height. As Raleigh's life ebbs, every sound of conflict, gunfire and cannonading abruptly ceases, to be resumed again only as Stanhope leaves the dugout. This is purely theater and not authentic or believable drama.

The bogusly martial comedy overture by Freddy Clark and his R-K-Olians is the only auxiliary feature.

RIALTO

"WHITE HELL OF PITZ PALU." A Universal release of the H. R. Sokal film, "Die Weisse Holle vom Piz Palu," based on ideas of and directed by Arnold Fanck and Ladislaus Vadja. Reviewed Saturday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Against the towering snow-capped Alpine peaks, dotted with infinitesimal man endeavoring to pit his feeble strength against the titanic forces of nature, a tense human drama is here unfolded.

Primarily a travelogue of the Swiss Alps, "White Hell of Pitz Palu," presents one of the finest bits of pantomimic character acting seen since the advent of the sound and dialogue pictures. Even though the gossamer thread of narrative, like the struggle of mere man against the elements, is sheer and insignificant in comparison to the gigantic scenery which forms the proscenium, it greatly enhances the grandeur of the natural scenery.

Of the six or seven characters of the story only three are concerned with the development of an engrossing human drama. Gustav Diesel, as the lonely wanderer, ever seeking the remains of his wife who tragically fell to her doom off the North Wall of Palu on her wedding night, contributes a splendid characterization, giving the role the touch of a master actor thoroughly trained in every branch of repressed emotional acting. As the befriended couple practically enacting the same potentially tragic drama as did the wanderer, Leni Reifenstahl and a player whose name flitted past too quickly, are only excelled by Herr Diesel. They delineate the two parts with all the finesse of actors of highest rank.

Mere words are inadequate to describe the gorgeous scenic effects obtained both on the ground and from the air. Especial mention is due Ernst Udet (who also uses his real name in the picture), the renowned German ace, for his spectacular stunting among the towering summits of the mountains during the climacteric moments of the story. His efforts are largely responsible not only for many thrilling airplane maneuvers but for Alpine photographs of incomparable beauty and uniqueness.

From start to finish "White Hell of Pitz Palu" smacks of its German origin, so effective is the typically Teuton technique in utilizing camera angles to produce bizarre effects, especially in close-ups, as well as strict adherence to character delineation (apparently without the use of make-up) and the meticulous care with which almost insignificant details are given their full share of importance for the clarity and appreciation of the screen narrative.

Although devoid of dialogue, the picture carries a full synchronized musical score with sound effects added at appropriate times.

Going from the sublime to the ridiculous, Marjorie Beebe demonstrates that "Radio Kisses" may by transformed into the real thing, and Graham MacNamee newscasts the events of the day for Universal.

EARLE

"DUMB-BELLS IN ERMINE." A Warner Bros. production of Lynn Sterling's stage play, "Weak Sisters," adapted for the screen, by Harvey Thew, featuring Robert Armstrong and Barbara Kent. Directed by John Adolfi. Reviewed Saturday night by W. A. Whitney.

Just why this excruciating comedy should be titled in just this manner is the only mystery attached to "Dumb-Bells in Ermine." There do not appear to be any dumb-bells present and even less ermine, but withal, there is everything that combines to make for an evening of hilarity—a cast entirely versed in comedy portrayal, situations innately comical, conceived by Lynn Sterling and lines from the pen of James Gleason.

This farce of reformers and purifiers is predicated upon the idea that such frock-coated gentlemen desire only to eradicate those things which they have tried and found disagreeable in one way or another. Arthur Hoyt, as the reformer, bears the burden of many comedy situations in association with Mary Foy, as the reformer's mother.

Love interest is of secondary interest and is played by Robert Armstrong as the aspirant to the welterweight championship, and Barbara Kent, the charming modern daughter of parents with decidedly bluish propensities. Charlotte Merriam is seen as Mr. Hoyt's blonde menace and James Gleason is Mr. Armstrong's trainer.

While all the people contribute convincing impersonations in the unfolding of this farce, Beryl Mercer and Claude Gillingwater outshine the rest of the cast. Miss Mercer plays the delightful grandmother who, in spite of the family atmosphere, delights in a surreptitious smoke and a glance at the sporting page. It is she who manages to smooth out the traditionally rough course of true love. Mr. Gillingwater again has another fat role as the crabbed old gentleman with young ideas.

Whether or not Mr. Gleason has utilized any of Mr. Sterling's original lines of "Weak Sisters" is not said, but, entirely aside from that, he has written some of the wittiest and most apt lines, full of penetrating repartee and American slang, that have yet flowed from his facile pen. In his direction John Adolfi has plumbed all the sources for comical effects and has blended them together admirably.

Cofeatured with "Dumb-Bells in Ermine" is Joe Frisco, in person, assisted by Rita Corrita. His long series of rapid-fire wisecracks, stories, patter and dances won him salvos of applause Saturday evening.

Supporting the double bill are two comedies, "Who Pays?" and "Fat Wives for Thin," that are mildly amusing. Releases of the Pathe and Paramount newsreels complete the screen subjects.

For an overture are presented selections from Rudolf Friml's tuneful "The Vagabond King," with the recorded voice of Richard Crooks singing "Only a Rose."

PALACE

"THE LADY OF SCANDAL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, adapted from Frederick Lonsdale's play of "The High Road," starring Ruth Chatterton, supported by Basil Rathbone, Ralph Forbes and Cyril Chadwick. Directed by Sidney Franklin. Reviewed Saturday night.

It was probably a trifle too optimistic to expect two such delightful comedies as "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" from the same author and the same producing company in the same twelvemonth. I should have known better. However, "The Lady of Scandal" is by no means a total loss, although I deem it an ill-chosen vehicle for the distinguished, but not all-embracing, talents of Miss Ruth Chatterton.

Almost completely devoid of the spontaneity, the sparkling dialogue and the breezy smartness of the earlier Lonsdale picture, this more labored work is more suggestive in outline of "Trelawney of the Wells." Its central character is a musical comedy actress, engaged to the scion of an aristocratic English house, whose family bitterly resents her effrontery in daring to seek to enter it by marriage. Counseled by the girl's father, however, they agree to countenance the match long enough for Elsie to discover what a colossal blunder she has made. Their plans become slightly involved when the fascinating Miss Hillary falls in love with a young man of title, already having an affair with a married woman resident in Paris. Being nothing if not resourceful, she eventually throws both ardent suitors over and returns to the stage and her career.

Here is an inconsequential story that can claim little beyond the scintillant quality of its telling to commend it to the attention of discriminating amusement seekers. With that quality in large degree absent, it is not so forte!

The role of Elsie Hillary is not, to my view, deally patterned to the requirements of Miss Chatterton. Hers are not the vivacious endowments of a spirited and insouciant prima donna of opera bouffe. On the contrary, I was given the impression throughout her performance that she was still playing the tearful mother in "Sarah and Son." And maybe she was!

The supporting cast is composed of stage players of repute. Basil Rathbone and Ralph Forbes, Miss Chatterton's joint leading men—the latter her husband in private life—are competent, but wholly uninspired, and Herbert Bunston again is the punctilious and whining pater familias. The conspicuously amusing performance of the lot is contributed by Frederick Kerr, as the crochety and guttural Lord Trench, whose growls become grimaces only under the mellowing influence of a continuous flow of cocktails, which he was presumed to hate, but was found to like as long as they were disguised under the doubtful pseudonym of "gullet washes." Nance O'Neil affords this grumbling old bear a splendid foil in the role of Lady Trench. Cyril Chadwick lags a little behind his best, and the rest do not matter.

On the stage, Richy Craig, jr., monologues his way through a genial job of mastering ceremonies, and in the course of his witty monograph finds time to introduce the Michon Brothers, Joe and Pete, in some novel tumbling and acrobatic; the Sydell Sisters in an Apache dance that will make your eyes pop right out of your head, no less, and an especially exciting detachment of Chester Hale Girls. The revue is called "Varieties," which is probably as good a name as any.

Mr. Galge's organ recessional and the Hearst Metrotone News completed the performance I attended, although there may be an overture by now.

FOX

"BORN RECKLESS." Fox production, from the novel "Louis Beretti," by Donald Henderson Clarke, starring Edmund Lowe, supported by Catherine Dale Owen, Directed by John Ford. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

This is a film about gangsters, gunmen, hoodlums, racketeers, or whatever name the noxious breed thrives best under. It tells nothing particularly new about them, all their pretty traits having been rather thoroughly exploited in fiction, press and pictures during a decade or two. The familiar stuff is worked over here into a good enough story, logically told and very well acted. There is plenty of gunplay, and the noole gunmen not only say "Oh, yeah?" at each other frequently, but in the long run kill each other almost totally off, offering at least one form of satisfaction.

The truth is that no matter how reckless and lively these gangsters may be, their actions can't stir any very high excitement in reasonable spectators, simply because they are so obviously mental defectives.

The hero of this affair begins his heroics by sneaking away from the home of his honest Italian parents to rob a jeweler, according to his habit. He and two associates are caught and sentenced by the district attorney to enlist with the A. E. F. and report to him when the war is over. On his return Louis Beretti turns straight by opening a night club, and when one of his old friends bumps off a comrade he scolds him severely. But even this virtuous attitude fails to save him from the fate that follows from his old career and his allegiance to the underworld code. The same murderous friend kidnaps the child of the woman Louis has promised to befriend, and this impels him to break away from the bond of silence. In the dainty words of the kidnaper, he "couldn't keep his nose clean," and he pays the inevitable penalty.

The direction is good except for some strangely abrupt and confusing shifts of scene that add to the general difficulty of keeping track of the rather involved relations of the various members of the gang. Edmund Lowe's portrait of Beretti is convincing enough but not particularly striking. Catherine Dale Owen is pleasant in the part of the woman of higher caste who takes a friendly interest in Beretti, and Marguerite Churchill does some excellent work in brief appearances as his sister.

On the stage some handsome decorative ideas are worked out in Fanchon and Marco's "Black and Gold," including dancing damsels and all that go with them. The Kemmeys are three muscular artists who achieve something new in acrobatic twists and poses, aided by Eva Ivey. Arnold Grazer does a surprising and spectacular bit. Lee Wilmot is a good comic dancer. Maxine Hamilton is also present. There are news pictures.

METROPOLITAN

"THE VAGABOND KING." Paramount Technicolor production from the stage operette of the same name, starring Dennis King, supported by O. P. Heggie, Jeanette MacDonald, Lillian Roth and Warner Oland. Directed by Ludwig Berger. Original Friml score. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.

Aware of how precious was its possession in the rights to this enchanting operetta, Paramount has put forth its supreme effort to do justice to a combination of story and music that enthralled thousands in a spectacular footlight career. The result is an offering of compelling beauty and magnificence, which no predecessor in this particular field of screen entertainment has so much as approached in all-around worth.

The story, built about Francois Villon, the fifteenth century poet, vagabond, thief and lover, is of the type that refuses to die. From novel, play and stage operetta, it reaches the films as dashing and glamorous as Villon himself—Villon, rogue and beggar, sentimentalist and brilliant leader of men, whom it presents as finding himself in the eyes of a woman and willingly bartering his life for the privilege of serving seven days as the ruler of France, so that he may reach her ideal of manhood through saving Paris from threatened disaster.

Dennis King, who starred in the operetta on the stage, brings his role, virtually unchanged, to the screen. His splendid voice and electric personality register well, and he gives himself to the part with an operatic abandon that is not out of keeping with the romantic tone of the production. How he sings the "Song of the Vagabond!" And how the chorus sings it! Age will never lessen the thrill of this mighty song.

All the Friml favorites of the piece are finely rendered. "Only a Rose" forms a duet for Mr. King and Jeanette MacDonald, whose clear, lilting soprano was introduced to the screen in support of Maurice Chevalier in "The Love Parade." The exquisite "Huguette Waltz" falls to the lot of Lillain Roth, a young woman hitherto known as a comedienne, who brings to the vital, tragic role of Villon's sweetheart of the scums an appeal that makes itself felt more strongly than Miss MacDonald's as the lovely and artistocratic Katherine.

O. P. Heggie gives a portrayal of the weak but crafty King Louis XI that deserves a place in the gallery of filmdom's most noteworthy characterizations. Warner Oland and others of distinction are cast in smaller roles.

There are comedy and tragedy in "The Vagabond King" and a romanticism that takes you far from the land of today. But enveloping all these there is beauty—beauty of sight as well as sound. The sets of the palace, the vagabond tavern and the cathedral are a delight, and the colors are, for the most part, rich and clear.

All in all, the production is an artistic triumph for the screen. We urge you not to miss it.

A newsreel is the only auxiliary.

COLUMBIA

"CAUGHT SHORT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production suggested by Eddie Cantor's book, starring Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, supported by Anita Page and Charles Morton. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by J. F. Brady.

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in their latest comedy riot, fight and make up, fight again and produce a veritable laughfest for an hour or more.

It can not be said that this is their best work on the screen, yet it perhaps is more dignified than some of their previous screen stories and, in that it is a better picture. There are times when the thin plot material drags and occasionally the action reaches the point of silliness. As an entirety, however, "Caught Short" is good, wholesome entertainment. There is none of the slapstick comedy which one might expect. And the picture is better off without it.

Miss Dressler and Miss Moran make an excellent team, the former's clowning tickling the funny bone to the greater degree. In this story they retain their own names, Marie and Polly, which adds to the intimacy and interest. Miss Page and Mr. Morgan, as the son and daughter of these two pals, in love with one another, make the most of their parts, and it takes some acting to do that! The children seem a bit out of place in the story, a hindrance at times to the comedy. Several subtitles are introduced, perhaps as a novelty.

Serenely happy in their place as boardinghouse keepers, on opposite sides of the street, these two, Marie and Polly, are getting along nicely until Polly mops up heavily in her stock market operations and becomes a millionairess over night. She has not been successful in inducing her friend to play the market, and another fight separates the pair. Meantime, their son and daughter have fallen in love, but now the mothers, at war, break off the match. To get even, Marie plays her all on the market and is also successful. Now that riches have come to both, they are even more at odds over the love affair of the children, Polly going so far as to announce a fake wedding to be of her son, which almost becomes a reality. It is while the minister is about to perform the ceremony that word comes of the big "crash" in the market and all are "caught short."

Some crashes are blessings in disguise, and so it was in this case, for it meant back to the boardinghouse business, now as partners, and the tying tight of the marital knot for the youngsters. These two pals had learned their lesson—that their place on the playboard of life was in the boarding house, where they could command happiness and contentment for themselves and those about them. "Caught Short" will keep you amused, drive away the blues and assassinate a pleasant two hours for you.
